

Superintendent says budget will lead to 'warehousing'

by Arlene Surprenant
If the lean 1992 school budget is adopted at April's town meeting, it will lead not so much to the education of students as to the "warehousing" of youngsters, according to Wilmington School Superintendent William Fay.

Fay and members of the school committee met with the finance committee last Wednesday to review next year's school budget. In his message, Fay said parents and students should be prepared for several changes which will impact the quality of education next year. These changes will include less teachers and larger classes, which could cause some students to "fall through the cracks." It will also include bumping of teachers, which will cause "wholesale disruption to our schools." In addition, the proposed $12.6 million budget will reduce the margin of safety with only seven buses scheduled to transport students next year.

"This budget sets us up to lose," summed up the superintendent.

Fay explained, with nothing left in textbooks, supplies, and other accounts, any further cuts could only come from the current staff. He added at this point school will open in September three to five positions short of where the system should be.

Fincom Chairman Paul Palizzolo warned the town could be facing a one million dollar deficit because of lower than expected revenue figures, higher expenditures, and uncertainty over the state aid situation. This could mean the schools would be forced to cut another $250,000 to $500,000, the chairman said.

"That will be catastrophic, in my opinion," noted Palizzolo.

Fincom members tried to find areas where further reductions could be made. Palizzolo targeted the transportation account for special education.

"It looks like a limosine service," Palizzolo said. According to Dr. Shirley Callan, school board chairman, it will cost Wilmington $371,000 to transport 46 special needs students back and forth to school next year.

Palizzolo suggested Fay look at creative ways to reduce this figure including paying parents to drive their own children or offering to abate their taxes. Fay said administrators each year try to reduce this cost but parents are either unwilling or unable to help with the driving. He said Wilmington also tried to combine bus service with other towns but, according to state law, the students can't spend more than an hour on the bus.

Palizzolo also suggested reducing the salaries of the four mini-van drivers, one of whom is part time. The total salaries for 1991-92 reportedly come out to $128,136. Palizzolo pointed out the drivers' salaries are higher than those of some teachers in the system. According to one source, this figure includes uniforms and $50 Hush Puppy shoes for the drivers. Fay said the new contract will reflect "a more reasonable" salary.

Phil Spelman suggested administrators make sure they are getting all they can in state reimbursements. Fay said, except for one area, this was being done. He added he expected to save $6,000 to $7,000 from transporting special education students in the summer.

When Fay noted some industrial arts classes are sitting empty because of the cut-backs, Palizzolo suggested working with the Shawsheen Tech to provide courses for those students planning to enter the workforce. Fay said because of scheduling and transportation problems this has "proven not to be a feasible solution."

Fincom members wanted to know if Wilmington youngsters will still get a quality education next year. Fay said the quality would be reduced mainly because the system is being forced to move away from its prime objective, to focus on each child in the system. Dr. Callan stated that those most impacted will be the average and marginal students who will suffer from larger class sizes and no extra help. John DeMarco explained 90 percent of the cuts made by his committee were in salaries and will affect programs next year. The committee explained they tried to make reductions across the board instead of eliminating entire programs. Fay said, traditionally, any programs cut usually do not return.

Palizzolo appealed to school unions to negotiate a lower salary, both for the sake of fellow teachers slated to lose their jobs and students who will likely suffer because of the cuts. He pointed out the town manager has not included raises for town employees in next year's budget. Town contracts end this June 30. On the other hand, said Palizzolo, teachers have been given a seven percent increase in the last year of their contract which Palizzolo felt "in this day and age is extremely excessive."

Charlie plays the part of Christ in a passion play, "The Saviour," presented annually at the Wilmington Congregational Church on Good Friday. The play depicts the betrayal and crucifixion of Christ, after which he is taken down and carried out. Carrying Charlie are Michael Donovan, Sharon Atamian, Bob Sweet and Steve Caren. The play will be presented in the church at 8 p.m. Friday. Last year's performance was before a full house.

Sewer moratorium blocks occupancy of housing units

by Arlene Surprenant

A moratorium has temporarily halted a sewer tie-in for the Shawsheen Commons affordable housing project off Hopkins Street.

At Friday's meeting with Paul Levy, executive director of the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority, Wilmington officials questioned what could be done to lift the moratorium imposed by a federal court judge in February. The moratorium prevents new projects which would pump over 2,000 gallons of sewage a day into the MWRA system from hooking into the sewer line. Levy said, even if a developer already has a permit, he is prohibited from tying into the system until Governor William Weld and state legislators agree to locate a landfill with a sludge backup facility in Walpole or another acceptable site. The proposed 95-acre site in Walpole is owned by the state and has reportedly met all criteria. However, it was not transferred to the MWRA in December as planned, said Levy. The judge imposed the moratorium in order to pressure the state to move on the transfer, he said.

Developers and towns have a right of appeal but only a few exemptions are expected to be made, and those will only be made for public health and safety reasons, said Levy.

"The moratorium stays in effect until that (the Walpole issue) is solved," said Levy.

Developer Jay Tighe, spokesman for the Donnel Corporation which is constructing Shawsheen Commons, told the Town Crier the town and proponents are already appealing the moratorium decision. After several delays, the sewer line from Grove Avenue to the Shawsheen Elementary School and the housing site itself is just about complete. The decision to halt further tie-ins creates yet another delay for the 220-unit project.

Tighe said he was unsure what the moratorium's impact will be on prospective homeowners, who were expected to close on their new homes this month, and on banks which are investing in the project.

"We've overcome alot," Tighe said, adding that the project will definitely go forward when this issue is resolved.

Town officials voice objections to sewer rates

by Arlene Surprenant

Though the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority is trying to lessen sewer costs to ratepayers after 1996, Wilmington officials voiced loud opposition on Friday to escalating sewer rates and inequities in the way the rate structure is set up. Wilmington's preliminary sewer assessment for fiscal '92 is $1,100,828, a 45.6 percent increase over this year's assessment of $756,000.

"It appears Wilmington is paying more of the cost," Selectman Robert Cain complained to MWRA Executive Director Paul Levy on Friday. Levy had agreed to the joint meeting with state and town officials.

The director was sympathetic to the plight of towns like Wilmington, which are only partially sewered but still have to pay high rates. He said the rate is based on the town's total population and not on how many homeowners and industries are hooked up to the sewer system. Consequently, those who are on sewer are paying twice as much as residents in fully sewered towns, Levy explained.

Levy said the MWRA Board of Directors will be looking at a new rate methodology but, in the meantime, sewer meters to measure flows leaving communities will likely be installed within the next year to make things more equitable.

The MWRA was created in 1985 by the governor and the state legislature to modernize water and sewer services in the metropolitan area and to spearhead the clean-up of Boston Harbor. The clean-up program was ordered by federal court and includes primary and secondary treatment plants to be built on Deer Island, a tunnel bored between Deer and Nut islands to carry sewage to the plants, and an effluent tunnel to carry treated wastewater away from Boston Harbor.

According to Levy, sewer rates will continue to climb until they double in 1996. After that they are expected to increase by a modest six percent each year. Levy said, in order to save ratepayers two billion dollars of the projected $6.1 billion cost of the clean-up project, the MWRA is seeking court permission to halt work in 1996 to evaluate the need to build the rest of the secondary plant. He said this was being done because the harbor seems to be getting cleaner faster than was expected. The temporary halt is expected to ease some of the burden on ratepayers in the 60 cities and towns serviced by the MWRA.

Arthur Smith, chairman of the Wilmington Water and Sewer Commission, was most outspoken about problems facing the town. He told Levy Wilmington's water system is 90 percent complete but, in order to protect that water, the town has to continue with new sewer construction like the East Interceptor sewer project. Smith explained though this is the best climate to bid such work, it's difficult to expect taxpayers to pick up higher sewer costs and agree to bonding for much of the $7 million cost. Meanwhile, without the new interceptor to pick up industrial discharges, said Smith, nitrates will flow from Wilmington to Reading's water supply.

Selectman Chester Bruce questioned the proper route to take to appeal the escalating rates. Levy pointed to two options: petitioning the MWRA to change their methodology or going to court and charging discrimination. Smith noted if Wilmington refuses to pay its assessment, the money will be deducted from state aid.

Town Manager Michael Caira zeroed in on recent revisions in the MWRA billing cycle which, he said, serve to "hamstring" the town. Levy explained the changes were made because of a cash flow problem and were proposed to reduce the agency's overall costs. He suggested, instead of Wilmington collecting sewer payments four times a year, officials consider more frequent billing to encourage residents to better budget their payments.

"People can't live under these conditions. People can't (even) eat," said Ring Avenue resident Tony Capuano, who asked how people can budget what they don't have. He pointed out those hardest hit by the new rates will be the elderly who live on fixed incomes.

"Why are we being punished?" Capuano asked.

"Everybody's being punished. We're all part of the same system," Levy replied.

In other discussion, the town complained about the prevailing wage law and its effect on construction costs. Smith referred to the law as "a huge welfare project that blows your mind."

Levy said the MWRA could shave a quarter of a billion dollars off the clean-up costs by bidding work under Chapter 30 instead of Chapter 149. Chapter 30 covers state roads and awards construction contracts to the lowest bidder. Chapter 149 applies to structures and is known as the filed sub-bid law. Under this law, sub-contractors file sub-bids and these are rolled into the general bids. Because both sides build extra contingency costs into their bids, the total bid comes in four to eight percent higher than those under chapter 30. Levy said there is a bill before the Senate to exempt sewer facilities from Chapter 149. Smith said, under the filed sub-bid law, there's no effort to keep sub-bids down.

Land sales could net $140,000

by Arlene Surprenant

Wilmington officials, to date, expect to realize over $140,000 on the sale of non-conforming town-owned lots if town meeting approves an article outlining the competitive bid process. If approved by voters, that money will go into a stabilization fund for future capital expenditures.

Article 21 would allow the town to sell town land once it's declared surplus and goes through a competitive bid process. A new state law known as Chapter 30B covers the sale process.

At Tuesday's joint hearing of the

Typesetting equipment donated to Shawsheen Tech

Students in the graphic arts department at Shawsheen Tech can now spend more time in hands-on learning, thanks to a donation of typesetting equipment from Typographic Systems, Agfa Compugraphic Division of Agfa Corporation.

Four digital typesetters, a laser image setter, plain paper printer and keyboards and monitors for typesetting were included in the donation, according to Pat Nowakowski, product manager for Typographic Systems.

Representatives from Typographic Systems recently visited the school to make the donation and tour the graphics department and other facilities.

Shawsheen's graphic arts program exposes students to all aspects of the production of the printed word.

Students learn phototypesetting, composition, photography, stripping, plating, presswork and bindery operations in preparation for a wide variety of careers in the printing and publishing field.

Fourth of July plans in high gear

by Arlene Surprenant
As spring arrives in Wilmington, the Fourth of July Committee moves into high gear preparing for the annual Fourth of July celebration.

This year, that celebration will take place from Monday, July 1 to Saturday, July 6. The highlight of the festivities will be the large fireworks display on July 5.

Committee Chairman Jim Stewart met with selectmen Monday to update them on this year's plans. Along with regularly scheduled activities like the suppers and concerts on the town common and the carnival at the high school, several organizations are preparing to welcome Wilmington servicemen home from the Persian Gulf both on Memorial Day and in July. Stewart offered his committee's assistance to any group planning special events. The Knights of Columbus and several local veteran's groups have formed under the name United for a Heroes' Welcome and have already announced plans for a dance May 11.

Stewart also told selectmen of plans to make minor renovations to the Fourth of July Headquarters in preparation for the celebration. The work will include interior and exterior painting, supports added to the floor, the replacement of part of the roof, and new carpeting. The building will be painted white with black trim which will replace the current red, white, and blue color scheme. The $3,000 total cost will be picked up by his committee and others using the building, Stewart said.

The next meeting of the Fourth of July Committee will be Tuesday, April 9 at 8:30 p.m. at the Fourth of July Headquarters across from the common. Stewart issued an invitation to attend to any organization which wants to be involved in the celebration.

Auditorium project less than initial price tag

by Arlene Surprenant
Wilmington residents got some good news about the Barrows Auditorium renovation project at Tuesday's public hearing on the town meeting articles.

Town Manager Michael Caira told those present instead of a $300,000 price tag, the price has been reduced to $225,000. Without built in contingencies, the estimated cost would be closer to $196,000, Caira said. Included in the auditorium work is $66,000 to replace 487 seats and electrical work estimated to cost $140,000.

In addition to a lower projected cost, Caira explained there could be as much as $136,000 left over from the high school boiler project which could go toward the work. Originally, that figure came in around $99,000. The money could be transferred to the renovation project if voters approve article 10.

On April 18, the Permanent Building Committee overseeing the project will receive bids for the job. This means the town will have specific figures before them when they vote in April, said the manager. Caira added there has been such a good bidding climate in Massachusetts lately that the figures could come in lower than expected.

Funding will not only come from the boiler project but also from money raised from the Celebration of the Arts and ongoing fundraisers to be held between now and the summer. The fundraising effort is being spearheaded by Performing and Fine Arts Director Lorraine Kalil.

The recent week-long Celebration of the Arts raised over $6000, Miss Kalil told the Town Crier. The fund-raising efforts are continuing with a pledge drive and events scheduled in May including a ham-and-bean supper and a colonial-era concert at the Congregational Church.

Concord Street traffic lights will be installed

by Arlene Surprenant
Representatives of Spaulding and Slye, developers of the proposed commercial subdivision known as Riverpark 93, met with Wilmington selectmen Monday to seek their help in installing signals on Concord Street at the ramp to Route 93 North.

Project spokesman Kevin Hassey explained the company agreed to provide and pay for signals not only by the northbound ramp but at the southbound I-93 ramp and at the intersection of Riverpark Drive and Concord Street as well. The traffic lights are expected to alleviate increased traffic due to the project. In addition to these three lights, Spaulding and Slye agreed to pay half the cost of signals at the Woburn and Concord streets intersection. The latter was a request of the Wilmington Planning Board, which reviewed the project's plan two years ago. Hassey assured selectmen his company plans to honor that commitment.

Riverpark 93 will be located on an 800,000 square foot site off Concord Street. Much of the site and all of the proposed buildings will be located in North Reading. Wilmington officials have said the project will not benefit the town since none of the buildings will bring revenue to the town's coffers. In addition, they said the project will generate more traffic which will negatively impact the town. Hassey explained the signal plans have already been reviewed by the state Department of Public Works and the town. He said signals will be installed at two intersections this summer. However, the state will only enter into an agreement with the town before the work can be done.

Town Manager Michael Caira said the agreement is currently being reviewed by town counsel. Selectman Robert Cain pointed out, in the interest of saving money and time, it might be better if Spaulding and Slye incorporated the Woburn Street traffic light into the rest of the signalization project and pick up the whole cost as the town has no extra funds at this time. Hassey said his company might be willing to do that. According to the town engineer, the cost of signaling that intersection will be $85,000.

John Forest, a candidate for the board of selectmen, argued that Wilmington shouldn't pay any of the costs since it's not benefiting from the project. Caira said he will calculate a "reasonable" cost for the Woburn Street intersection and formally ask Spaulding and Slye to incorporate that work with the three other signals.

The first two buildings in the development are being built now and will reportedly be ready for occupancy next March.

Pocketbook searches illegal

by Arlene Surprenant
School Superintendent William Fay has ordered that school officials immediately stop their practice of searching pocketbooks before students are admitted to school functions. Several high school students had protested the practice of opening purses at dances so that administrators could better control what is brought onto school premises.

In a March 6 letter to all administrators, Fay said according to a legal opinion from Department of Education Counsel Rhoda Schneider and advice from Wilmington police, "it seems clear that schools are not subject to the strict probable cause criteria that law enforcement agencies are obligated to abide by." In addition, Fay said it was also clear that administrators do not have the authority to conduct random blanket searches. Inspecting pocketbooks or even requiring them to be opened is considered an indiscriminate blanket search, said the superintendent, as is the requirement of having boys turn out their coat pockets.

Fay said, if the searches continue, there could be possible "civil damage implications" for the school system. After researching case law, he continued, it was found there is no similar case where the school's position was upheld by the courts.

It's YOUR Money

THE GIFT YOU GET TO KEEP

Charities call it "planned giving." accountants call it an "effective tax break." A gift annuity enables the giver to support a favorite college or charity and gain, in return, tax advantages and retirement income, too. The vehicle is a charitable remainder trust.

Though smaller contributions can be made, the trust is most worthwhile if you're holding a substantial amount of unrealized gains in investments. You give the trust your assets free of capital gains taxes; the trust, in turn, sells the assets and invests the proceeds to create income for your retirement and perhaps that of your spouse. At the death of the donor (and spouse, if it's set up that way), the remainder goes to the named charity.

Tax law considers that the gift is given at the time the trust is set up, and that is when the donor gets an income tax deduction. The amount of deduction depends, usually, on the age of the donor and the projected payout period.

As for about tax saving trusts of all kinds. We've got the know how you need at....

She continued to pursue her interest in school and community at Harvard University, graduating with a masters Degree in Counseling and Consulting Psychology. While at Harvard, she was elected to Phi Delta Kappa, a National Honor Society in Education. In June of 1988, Shirley was awarded a Doctor of Education degree from Harvard University in area of Teaching, Curriculum and Learning Environments and was nominated by the Dean of the Harvard Graduate School of Education for the National Spencer Fellowship which gives promise of yielding new knowledge leading to the improvement of education.

Currently, Shirley is the Director of the Parents Education Project in the Methuen Public Schools. The Project is a model program focusing on parental involvement in the school and community. She has also been appointed as Researcher/Evaluator for a model Project for Out of School Youth at the Greater Lowell Regional Vocational Technical School. Prior to her position in Methuen, she was Director of Lowell Futures for the Lowell Public Schools and coordinated 23 programs for dropout prevention encompassing $687,000 in student services. Dr. Shirley F. Callan served on numerous sub committees and is always willing to volunteer when their is a need, whether it be on a Committee or to listen to and help a parent who may have a concern.

Shirley's proudest achievements reflect educating our students, supporting our teachers while keeping a responsible eye toward sound fiscal management. She believes she is an independent voice and consistently acts in the best interests of the students, the school system and the community. Her future goals rest on the belief that education must challenge our children to grow in every way through creative curriculum at all levels using every child's individual gift. She encourages parents to continue as partners in the education of their children. Shirley is also committed to making every dollar spent count for a quality education.

She believes that a strong beginning and a sound foundation are the building blocks of a successful future for the school children of Wilmington. Her education, background and experience make her uniquely qualified to help carry out that commitment.

Bradford L. Jackson

Bradford L. Jackson has recently announced his candidacy for a three year term on the Wilmington School Committee. As the former vice chairman of the Wilmington Finance Committee, Jackson will increase the School Committee's focus and expertise on the budget. Jackson also served as an appointed member of the School Committee from September 1989 through April 1990. During that time, Jackson quickly gained a reputation as a hard working and objective school committee member.

"It seems to me," Jackson commented recently, "that some school committee members seem more interested in furthering their personal agendas than in improving the quality and cost effectiveness of the education we provide. As a result, school committee meetings usually contain little discussion of educational policy issues and instead tend to be dominated by hours of rhetoric and bickering."

"I bring no biases to the table," Jackson continued. "This will allow me to look at each issue objectively and vote on the merits of the issue, not on the personality of the people involved."

Jackson, 34, is married to the former Patricia Carta. They live on Garden Avenue with their four children, Jessica, seven, a first grade student at the Woburn Street School, Katianna, five, Sarah, three and Brad, five months. Jackson holds a Bachelor of Science degree in Business Management and a Master's Degree in Business Administration from Babson College. He is an 11 year employee of Digital Equipment Corporation.

Jackson has been an active volunteer on behalf of the children of Wilmington. In addition to his service on the finance committee and school committee, Jackson is a member of the School Computer Study Committee, the Woburn Street School PAC, and the committee dedicated to soliciting private funding to build a handicap accessible playground at the Woburn Street School. In addition to these efforts, Jackson has served as coach in the Wilmington Youth Soccer League and a volunteer umpire in the Wilmington Little League.

Bradford Jackson

In his recent campaign announcement Jackson concluded: "The kids of Wilmington deserve the best education we can provide. But, given the current financial condition of the Town of Wilmington and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, meeting that goal will be difficult. It is time for new faces and new ideas. It's time to get the Wilmington School Committee back to business."

Dr. James Demos

My wife Eleanor and I have been living in Wilmington for over 30 years. We have three children who have graduated from Wilmington schools and two grandson who will be attending the Wilmington Public Schools.

My qualifications to be on the Wilmington School Committee consist of a doctoral degree from Boston College with a major in school administration and special education administration. A masters degree with a focus in elementary education, psychology and special education. A bachelors degree with a major in business administration and accounting with a minor in secondary education.

My experience consists of eight years as a classroom teacher in the Wilmington and Chelmsford Public Schools; three years as an executive director for the Greater Lowell Association for Retarded Citizens Educational and Rehabilitation Center; 21 years in school administration as the administrator of special education in the Lowell and Medford Public Schools; three years as an adjunct lecturer at Boston College School of Education and from 1972 to 1990 I have served 12 of these years on the Wilmington School Committee.

Currently, in Wilmington our public schools are being asked to reduce their budget substantially. The current School Committee is making some very difficult decisions as to where and what to cut. Whatever the cuts may be, if I am elected to the Wilmington School Committee, I would make my priority to find ways to maintain the quality of education that this community has taken many years to reach for our children.

Percentage of graduates who went on to higher education: 1982, 50 percent; 1987, 67 percent; 1988, 74 percent; 1989, 75 percent; 1990, 82 percent.

Breakdown of 1990 class: 29 percent attending four year private colleges; 32 percent attending four year state colleges; 21 percent attending two year state and private colleges. The balance of the 18 percent of the 1990 graduates, 16 percent entered the work force; 2 percent are furthering their education through the military.

Percentage of students who took the SATs: 1985, 66 percent; 1986, 72 percent; 1988, 74 percent; 1990, 83 percent.

Our latest Iowa tests (1990) which tested our fifth grade students' academic capabilities in such areas as reading, vocabulary, spelling, capitalization, punctuation, usage and expression of language, visual materials, reference materials, home study, mathematic concepts, mathematic problem solving, mathematic computation, social studies and science revealed that our Wilmington students, compared with the National distribution of pupil scores did as well or better than 71 percent of fifth grade students in the country.

Indicating some of our school department achievement emphasizes how our curriculum has given our students confidence, self esteem and the desire to want to achieve in whatever area they want to pursue.

My position on the School Committee shall be to preserve the quality of our basic curriculum.

I also strongly believe that all the extra curriculum activities such as clubs, sports, etc., are very important to the total educational development of our children. But, or economic times will not allow our public schools to offer all the activities that we have been accustomed to. Priorities have to be made. We can not lose all that we have gained in the areas of our basic curriculum. The public schools' major responsibility is to develop our young peoples' intellectual capabilities through achieving a good strong basic academic education.

Your children in today's world, in order to survive, need the basic academic knowledge to be able to compete and become economically creative and productive in their adult lives.

Please get out on April 20, 1990 and exercise your vote and I hope you would consider one of your two votes for James A. Demos, Ed.D. for School Committee.

Maggie on.. THE ISSUES

THE ECONOMY

- We need to cut frills and unnecessary items from our budget, but not at the expense of our children's education or the provision of vital public services.
- Fees, fines and higher taxes are punitive, often putting the burden on those least able to pay.
- We should take a more positive approach to solving our fiscal problems. We must all work together to develop new and innovative ways to provide services and generate revenues to offset our tax burden.

THE ENVIRONMENT

- We must protect our environmentally fragile wetlands by enforcing the laws that stop the dumping of hazardous waste and the filling in of swamps.
- Protection of our natural resources will have a beneficial effect on our health and the quality of our lives.
- If we do not address this issue now, there may may not be a worthwhile future for any of us.

EDUCATION

- The schools are in a crisis. Necessary budget cutting threatens to undermine the quality of education we can provide for our young people.
- Children are our future. The investment we make in them now will determine the quality of life for all of us in the 21st century.
- We must use every resource at our command to support and improve public education.

ELDERLY and DISABLED

- Our elderly and disabled citizens confront many of the same issues... social isolation, limited economic and educational opportunities, inadequate health care and lack of access to the resources necessary for full and productive lives.
- We must provide a supportive environment within the community and actively participate in state, federal and private efforts to improve the quality of life for those with special needs.
- Our elderly and disabled share a wealth of knowledge, experience and talent that can benefit us all.

The March 31, 1966 edition of the Town Crier of Wilmington noted that:

Pictured breaking ground the new Wilmington Ford establishment "the largest and finest automobile agency in New England" were Bennie Ristuccia, A.C. Denecker, E.K. Wheeler, Town Manager Richard Henneberger, John Cronin of Cronin Bros, Wilmington and Wilmington's Police Chief, Paul Lynch.

Weinberg's Department Store boasting an enlarged ladies department, was offering two piece knitted suits for $10; Gloria Swanson dresses from $9 to $18.

The first Hatch Act hearing took place in the town hall when Fred DiCenso of Quincy, contractor proposed plans for a 50,000 square foot building off West Street. The new law was designed to protect the state's wetlands.

The dramatic resignation of four members of the finance committee is no loss to the town. Individually fine fellows, their action has been one to clear the air and to give Wilmington an opportunity to get a finance committee that can be of worth to the community.

Tri-Town Mobil was advertising tires, nu-treds 13 or 14" black walls, $8.95.

Fifteen-year-old Dottie Hal was credited with saving the life of her baby niece in a fire which occurred at the Chester Hall home on Woburn Street.

Officer Charlie Dolan was pictured presenting the citation that made Governor John Volpe an honorary member of the Police Photographers' Association, Inc.

Ann Visconti of Nassau Avenue, Mary Cunningham of Fairmeadow Road and Irene Elfman of Lawrence Street were scheduled to represent Wilmington at a three day National Seminar and Workshop in Washington DC sponsored by the Democratic Party.

William Mann of Taft Road, Ruth Kitchner of Aldrich Road and Theodore Pearson of Washington Avenue were drawn for jury duty.

Margaret Imbimbo and Mary Paulsen both ranked among the top 10 in the Wilmington Women's Bowling League. Both attained an average above 94.

Elia's was offering Welch's tomato juice, four quart bottles for 99 cents; fresh asparagus at 29 cents a pound and a 10 pound bag of US No. 1 Maine potatoes for 49 cents.

letter to the editor

Dear Larz:

Enclosed is a copy of a letter written to the Wilmington Planning Board to thank them for judicious action in the denial of Corey's Ainsworth Road Industrial Sub-division. As you reported, it took a 10-month fight by the neighboring residents to finally swing it.

Mr. Corey, the developer can still take the issue to court. However, since the Planning Board denial, the State Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) has also denied his proposal on numerous accounts. The protection of the flood plain, the watershed, the management of storm water, groundwater protection and the protection of wildlife, along with some other related reasons.

Some residents of Wilmington have now entered a petition for their upcoming April Town Meeting to rezone this area back to a residential area. The rezoning is requested because it is believed that building homes will have a far less effect upon the aquifer (watershed) than any industrial development. We sincerely hope that your Wilmington readers will make it a point to go to the annual town meeting and support this rezoning request, thereby giving some possible protection of Wilmington's Brown's Crossing wells; this major source of water is to the benefit of the entire town.

In years past, The aster Plan for this area recommended that this land be acquired by the town and that it be a conservation zoned area for the protection of the watershed, wildlife and the quality of life. The State also agreed.

The elected officials of Wilmington have never stood together or taken any initiative action on this. The proposal included acquiring a small parcel of land which lies next to the Brown's Crossing Pumping Station. A requirement of the Massachusetts Safe Drinking Water Act of 1986 is that; Zone 1, the area that lies within a 400 foot radius of a new wellhead, the land is required to be owned by the water supplier. As applied to this problem, the lot which is the old railroad bed which lies between Woburn and Andover Streets has an assessed value of under $10,000 and it adjoins the already town owned Water Department land. It is hoped that town residents who have an interest in having safe drinking water would talk to their selectmen, including those who are running for office, to act to acquire this land. The appeal of a single citizen seems to fall on deaf ears.

In closing, I would like to say that the protection of water, watersheds and aquifers is seriously needed. Just because a person can draw a clear glass of water does not mean that this will be so tomorrow. Concern takes time, work and money, but most of all it must have a place in the Master Plan of the town. The Town of Wilmington does not have a Master Plan to protect the water supply of its residents. Yes, we do have a rather weak aquifer bylaw which was put in place last year.

Persons may often hear that Wilmington does have a Master Plan for sewers including how to ship sewerage out via the MWRA, but no plan of how to aep Wilmington with a continuing replacement of water. I hope that those residents of the area that receive your paper feel that this issue is important and will be concerned enough to let their elected officials know their concerns.

Mark Twain was said to quip that "Whiskey is for drinking, water for fighting over." Mr. Corey may take the issue to court, but neighbors will still fight for protection of the area and their residential rights and hope that we have others who support us and to also protect Wilmington's sources of water.

Sincerely,
Conrad J. Gerhartz

frankly speaking

By Kevin John Sowyrda

In a major rebuff to the anti-development group in Tewksbury, the Boston Globe has terminated free-lance writer Laurie Corliss Glasheen, former editor of the Merrimack Valley Advertiser. The announcement comes at the same time that Selectman Lou Carciofi and others are charging unfairness in how they have been covered by members of the media, including Glasheen.

Glasheen had consistently supported local activists Tom Camara and Ann Looney in their charges that some appointed and elected Tewksbury officials, including Carciofi, have breached legal and ethical standards relating to local development.

Camara is a Tewksbury Selectman and Looney is presently a candidate for the board.

In a private correspondence dated March 22, 1991, a copy of which was obtained by the Town Crier, Boston Globe Ombudsman Gordon C. McKibben wrote, "Within moments of the Globe learning the past community involvement of freelancer Laurie C. Glasheen, the editor in charge took steps to insure she will not do future reporting for the Globe."

McKibben's letter responded directly to a correspondence from a Tewksbury resident, who had forwarded a copy of an article appearing in this space on January 30, 1991 investigating Corliss Glasheen's own political involvement in the Tewksbury development issue, on which she has regularly reported.

The Town Crier revealed earlier this year that Glasheen held long-standing personal grievances against many politicians who met the fate of Glasheen's pen.

Glasheen's father, Francis Corliss, previously served on the Tewksbury Board of Selectmen, and had frequently gone to loggerheads with Building Inspector George Nawn, once going so far as to seek Nawn's ouster. Nawn was regularly criticized in Glasheen's local articles, and more recently scrutinized in Glasheen's freelance piece for the Boston Globe.

The Town Crier also revealed that another victim of Glasheen's writings, Charles Stella, had also been a political opponent of Glasheen's father. Years ago, Stella competed with Francis Corliss for a paid position on the Tewksbury Board of Assessors. Stella won the appointment in a bitter contest, with a key vote in his favor being cast by Assessor Norm Boudreau; still another victim of Glasheen's editorials and news writing.

Perhaps the most significant Glasheen revelation, "the smoking gun," was the fact that Glasheen was involved in a relationship with prominent builder Rob Ahern, who had been denied a comprehensive construction permit by the Zoning Board of Appeals on June 25, 1987.

Thereafter, Glasheen took on the ZBA in frequent articles, and continued the written vendetta in the recent Globe series.

Any element of surprise coming from the Globe editors may be disingenuous. When he was interviewed by the Boston Globe prior to the recent Glasheen series, Tewksbury Attorney Kevin Sullivan said he carefully outlined Glasheen's own community involvement to Globe staffer Jordanna Hart.

Boston Globe Ombudsman Gordon C. McKibben did not return phone calls from the Town Crier.

The Globe is not the first newspaper to fire Laurie Glasheen. Following bizarre litigation between herself and the Advertiser parent company Dole publications, Glasheen was abruptly replaced by the local at the end of last year.

Her recent branding by New England's largest daily makes Glasheen to journalism what Pamela Smart was to matrimony.

More significantly, the Globe washing its hands of Glasheen, the principal cheerleader for Tom Camara and Ann Looney, comes just as supporters of incumbent Selectman Lou Carciofi are claiming a surge in their local support, and success in their efforts to refute charges made by the media, specifically Glasheen.

Laurie Glasheen's journalistic ethics are a bit bizarre to begin with. While she was writing an expose on a Florida Road development, Glasheen, in a hand-written letter obtained by the Town Crier, implored an elderly Florida Road homeowner to sell his home to her. In the course of the letter Glasheen maligned a local developer, Armando Decarolis, in an attempt to dissuade the elderly man from selling the property to the developer.

Can Carciofi be resurrected?

Judging by his debate performance March 17 he's upstaged his opposition, which may be overrated. I lost count, but did Ann Looney say "I agree with Mr. Carciofi" ten times, or eleven? Did she say, "Mr. Carciofi is correct," three times, or four? Did Joe Brown really brag about being thrown out of selectmen's meetings? Was Tom Conlon really on stage?

Lou Carciofi was on stage, and in command. Whether or not he'll be in command at the voting booth remains to be seen, but the Globe's dismissal of his nemesis last week may give credence to Carciofi's long-standing argument that he has been portrayed unfairly.

The voters will decide in just ten days.

Dear Larz:

My husband lost a $40.00 Megabucks ticket that he purchased at the Uptown Deli in No. Wilmington.

Returning to the store the next evening he explained what happened. The man congratulated my husband and handed him $40.00. He had found the ticket on the floor and was waiting for someone to claim it.

We felt a public note of appreciation in recognition of the honesty of the owner of Uptown Deli was in order. Thank you - what a great feeling to know there are people such as yourself out there.

Sparks fly over travel trailer

by Arlene Surprenant
An article to change a town bylaw to allow for the storage of recreational vehicles on private property sparked unusual interest at Tuesday's public hearing on the 63 article warrant for the annual town meeting.

Petitioner Cheryl Hiltz told those in attendance at the joint hearing of the Wilmington Finance Committee and the local planning board all she wanted to do was update Section 3.7.1 of the prohibited use bylaw to allow her to store her 32 foot travel trailer when not in use.

According to Building Inspector James Russo, it is technically against the law to store recreational vehicles on private property but it's not against the law to own one. However, Russo pointed out that in the past he hadn't really enforced the law unless a complaint was filed. In this case, said Russo, he had received complaints from neighbors and was forced to ask Hiltz to remove her trailer. His letter to the owner was what prompted the article, Russo added.

St Williams CCD registration

St. William's Church in Tewksbury has begun registration for its 1991-92 CCD program which will begin in the fall. Parents of students who will be entering grades one through 10 in the fall should register their children for religious education classes. Classes are held Monday through Thursday from 4 to 5 p.m. for grades one through four and 7 to 8 p.m. for grades five through 10 and run from September until early May. Parents are urged to register early because assignment of class day is given on a first come, first served basis, so early registration is important.

Registration forms have been mailed home to students who are presently in the program. Parents must register their children every year. Ninth grade students from both public and private schools and any other high school student wishing to receive the Sacrament of Confirmation should register

The building inspector noted the law "can be interpreted in several ways," leading Selectman Robert Cain to propose a review of the "vague" law.

Tony Capuano, who is in the running for the board of selectmen in April's election, called for consistency on the part of town officials.

"Either we are going to have a law for the whole town or not for anybody," he said.

Russo had suggested that Hiltz go before the board of appeals for a permit with conditions to allow the trailer to stay on her land. Hiltz explained, because she didn't have the application fee, she chose to take the issue to town meeting. At the end of the discussion she explained, though Russo had tried to help her and treated her fairly, she still felt "discriminated against."

Russo recommended the bylaw not be changed. If it is changed, he said, residents already living illegally in their trailers will continue to do so.

for the classes which will begin in September.

When registering a child for religious education parents should consider becoming a volunteer in the CCD program. The success of the CCD program at St. William's in the past has been due to the people who volunteer to work in the program. Volunteers are needed as teachers and aides in every grade and as babysitters in the afternoon, clerical workers, hall monitors and traffic controllers.

Registration forms are available at the CCD office located at the Parish Center. The office is opened Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. until 2 p.m. The registration fee is $25 per child with a maximum of $55 per family. Please pay by check only. Your canceled check is your receipt and proof of registration.

For further information, call the CCD office at 851-3471.

Whitefield Elm section is missing

by Capt. Larz Neilson
In a recent show on Cable TV the story of Josephine Baker was told. Josephine was a songstress and dancer who became famous in Paris after World War I. The writer once saw Josephine, who was running a show for the benefit of the Free French Army, in Algiers, probably in 1944. Larz was the only non-French person in the audience, or so it seems.

The young lady who is playing the part of Josephine is named Lynn Whitefield. Many Wilmington residents will note that name because of the Whitefield Elm. Lynn, quite probably, is no relative of the Rev. Mr. Whitefield.

The Rev. Mr. Whitefield was an early Methodist missionary who preached in every British Colony, back about 20 years before the Declaration of Independence. The Puritan clergy of New England were not thrilled to have him in their communities.

In Wilmington the Rev. Isaac Morrill is reputed to not only have declined to allow the visiting clergyman the use of his pulpit, but also to have gone to every home in Wilmington to forbid his parishioners from listening to the visitor. That's the legend. Don't ask Larz to prove it.

Any way, Whitefield, according to the tale, preached under the elm tree in North Wilmington, to "only Indians."

That elm was a beautiful tree. It was cut down after its death about 1903. The Wilmington Women's Club put up a granite monument, near the sidewalk on the site of the elm back sometime about World War I, but that too disappeared.

The Elm was near the site of Harriman's tannery. A picture of the elm is in the town seal of Wilmington and if one scans closely one can see the tannery being shown back in the distance.

Today the nearest building to the site that can mark the tree is the Whitefield School, but it was built about 400 or more feet northerly, on the opposite side of the road.

After the Whitefield Elm was cut down the tree cut into a series of slabs, each slab being six or eight inches thick. Anyone in Wilmington who wanted one was free to take it.

Peter McMahon, who lived across the street, but not exactly, was a local butcher. Peter took a slab to use as a cutting block and he owned it for years.

After Peter's death it was given to Alice Docuette, RN, of Ballardvale Street. Her home, constructed by her father over 100 years ago, should have a story written about it someday. Another can be written about Alice, who was the town nurse and midwife for many years, a most charming lady.

The slab of the Whitefield Elm was kept for many years in the open space under the barn at the Doucette home. After the death of Alice, in 1978, Barney McMahon, a past president of the Wilmington Rotary Club thought it would be nice to get that slab and put it up as a monument in Rotary Park. But it didn't work out.

He found out that the slab of the Whitefield Elm was no longer in Wilmington. Alice, or someone else had given it to someone who lives in Connecticut.

And no one knows who that person was.

Cain candidate for re-election

I am pleased to have the opportunity to address you, the voters of Wilmington about my candidacy for re-election to the Board of Selectmen.

The Town of Wilmington is facing its most serious fiscal challenge in memory. Just as you and I, as homeowners and taxpayers, are faced with tough choices, the Town finds itself in the difficult position of doing more with less. I am seeking re-election to the board because I want to continue to deliver the high quality of service that you, the residents have come to expect.

I offer 13 years of experience as a selectman, including three years as chairman. During that time I served as an active participant in shaping the direction of Wilmington. I have represented the Town on the Middlesex County Advisory Board since 1980, and for five years I have served on the Budget Committee. My efforts on this committee assisted in reducing costly county assessments and reversed the runaway spending trend that had existed at the county level for so many years.

I was Wilmington's representative on the Citizen Advisory Committee formed to address the serious problem of hazardous waste at Industri-Plex 128. Through our efforts we were successful in halting development at this site, which the EPA listed as "one of the 10 most serious hazardous waste sites in America." The polluters were forced to bear the cost of the containment and cleanup. And as result of our success, the efforts of this committee stand today as a model for all hazardous waste resolution programs.

One of the Board of Selectmen's most significant accomplishments in recent years is the town's historic agreement with the Reading Municipal Light Department. I was one of the two principal negotiators for Wilmington and were successful in establishing an advisory board which ensures Wilmington's representation in policy matters. More important however, in this day and age of declining revenues and sky rocketing expenses, our agreement will provide Wilmington with more than five million dollars in new revenue over the next 20 years. This fiscal year alone we will receive nearly $250,000 in new revenue, all at no additional cost to the rate payers.

Wilmington's most valuable resource is its people. Residents, town employees, local officials, all reflect strong community pride. I'm proud to be a part of the Wilmington family and prouder still to have had the opportunity to work with so many dedicated and committed volunteers. Whether it's the 4th of July Committee, the recycling volunteers or any of the other productive and valuable boards and commissions. Wilmington is fortunate to be able to rely on such a wide range of talented people to assist in making

Robert Cain

Wilmington such a good place to live.

The future direction of Wilmington is dependent upon selecting qualified leaders to balance the needs of the community. We need strong effective and dynamic leadership and we need leaders willing to make tough decisions.

I offer my candidacy for your review. On April 20 you will be asked to go to the polls and make a statement on Wilmington's future. I hope to be part of that future as a member of the Board of Selectmen. Please consider me, Bob Cain, when casting your vote for selectman.

Butler seeks seat on housing authority

Dorothy Butler of 38 Deming Way, Wilmington is a candidate for election to the five year seat on the Wilmington Housing Authority.

Butler, a 32 year resident of Wilmington, raised two sons as a single parent, often times working two jobs to make ends meet. She is perhaps best known to many people as a waitress at Rocco's Restaurant where she worked for over 20 years.

As an active senior citizen and retiree, Mrs. Butler is running for the Housing Authority because she believes that there is a need for more affordable housing for our young, disabled and elderly residents. Says Butler, "I plan on being an advocate for our working families, disabled citizens, and retirees, working to build homes which are reasonably priced, giving average people the opportunity to live in town if they choose to do so."

Mrs. Butler knows how important it is to have affordable housing because she nearly became homeless herself due to circumstances beyond her control. "From my own personal experience I know the feelings of despair, helplessness and fear, which can be overwhelming, when you need a place to live. That is why I feel that people who apply for affordable housing should be treated with dignity, compassion, and respect which they deserve," explained Butler.

Dorothy Butler is a member of AIM, Wilmington's advocacy group for our disabled citizens; she is a member of the Massachusetts Tenants Organization, and was recently nominated to become an associate member of the Wilmington Democratic Town Committee. Mrs. Butler has earned the endorsement of the Deming Way Tenants Association, the first such endorsement of any candidate, for any office in the 30 year history of the group.

"Living at the Deming Way elderly housing development for nearly six years has taught me about the needs and concerns of tenants in public housing. I feel that there should be a tenant on the WHA to insure that we have a safe and secure home, which is well managed and maintained," said Butler. As past president of the Deming Way Tenants Association, serving for three years from November 1985 to March, 1989, Dorothy Butler is uniquely qualified to fill a post on the Housing Authority.

State seeks to return $50M in unclaimed funds

State Treasurer Joe Malone recently released the names of over 35,000 individuals and businesses that are due more than $50 million from abandoned accounts.

Under the State's Unclaimed Money Law, bank accounts, insurance proceeds, payroll checks, stock certificates and the like that have been inactive for at least five years are deemed to be abandoned. All such accounts must be reported to the Treasury, which then attempts to notify the rightful owners or legal heirs.

"Currently, there are over $50 million in unclaimed accounts. We will make every effort, using every means at our disposal, to make sure that this money is returned. This money belongs to these people and they deserve to have it," said Malone.

The Treasurer noted one important aspect of the Unclaimed Money Law which requires that until claimed, all funds are kept in the State's General Fund where they are invested for the benefit of all residents and taxpayers here in Massachusetts.

As part of an indepth study of the human body, Mrs. Kilfoyle is teaching about the functions of the bones of the skeletal system: Mrs. Senesi has helped first graders better understand the role of the muscular system and Mrs. Birmingham is teaching the function of the heart as it relates to the circulatory system. North Intermediate School

The sixth graders at the North Intermediate School in Wilmington are excited about their upcoming Medieval Fair to be held April 5. The students, under the direction of English teachers Mrs. Curran, Mr. Maderia, Mrs. Merlino and social studies teachers Mr. Mirisola and Mrs. Penttinen, have been working since early March on an interdisciplinary unit of study.

They have been researching famous people of the Middle Ages and have written research reports based on their findings. Each student has also designed a shield depicting their family rank and individual interests. Activities for the affair include calligraphy, demonstrations, basketry, woodworking, stain glass reproductions, just to name a few.

Visits by explorers, inventors and artists will be announced by a herald. All this and much more will take place at the North Intermediate School cafeteria Friday, April 5 from 8:15 a.m. to 11:15 a.m.

Dance will promote drug awareness

A video dance with a deejay lip sync competition and a dance contest will be among the activities at a "Just Say No Locomotion Promotion" drug and alcohol awareness program Friday, April 5 at 7:30 p.m. at Shawsheen Tech.

The event, sponsored by all four classes at the school and the Shawsheen Chapter of S.A.D.D., is being presented by Rack-a-Disk Inc., an Amherst based entertainment company that presents similar events across the country, with contest prizes of records and tapes provided by Warner Bros. Records.

The dance concept of the program is based on Rack-a-Disk's Club presentations. Videos are shown on a 20 foot screen, accompanied by rock, pop and rap music. The program started in February 1990 with a presentation in Deerfield. Randy Barth, founder of Rack-a-Disk, said the program uses "the energy of kids to get them aware of the problems of drug and alcohol abuse. The fun they have at these dances demonstrates that the best times can be had without alcohol or drugs." Barth said the event can leave students with the impression that "the coolest kids don't take drugs."

Fun Zone chooses logo

First prize in the Fun Zone Logo contest was captured by an artistic Ryland Blankington. Ryland is a third grader at Woburn Street School. His design idea was comprised of the letters of the words Fun Zone with small children swinging, climbing and sliding on the letters. Ryland will receive a $50 U.S. Savings Bond for his efforts.

Ryland had stiff competition from finalists Mark DiGiovanni, and Lauren Groves, both students at Woburn Street School. Honorable mentions went to Paul Cheney, Kristen Walsh, and Megan Lojek, all fourth graders at Wildwood School. Barbara Tate, a third grader at Abundant Life Christian School also received an honorable mention as well as Michael Carr from grade four at Woburn Street School. St. Thomas of Villanova

With so much of the media's attention focused on the latest youth crime wave in the area, it's refreshing to find a group of kids who are involved in positive activities.

With aprons, hats and gloves the ninth grade confirmation class turned Villanova Hall into Wilmington's latest "Pizza Pad!" As part of their confirmation project, the students under the careful eyes of pizza twirlers Fr. Brown and Ms. Helen DelTorto made over 600 pizzas and raised close to $2,000 to be given to Por Cristo Medical Group. Por Cristo, which means "For Christ," began as a dream; a simple vision shared by a bishop and a surgeon. What they foresaw was an organization dedicated to sharing modern medical knowledge with the under developed countries of Latin America.

The kids did a wonderful job of selling and making all the pizzas. They wish to thank everyone involved in helping to make this project a great success. God Bless you all.

The Shawsheen Valley Regional Vocation Technical High School located at 100 Cook Street, Billerica is seeking applicants for its

House Building Program in September 1991

Applicants must own land in the Regional School District comprising the towns of Bedford, Billerica, Burlington, Tewksbury or Wilmington

Complete details may be obtained by contacting the Business Office at 508-667-2111, ext. 105

Away at Tax Time?

Being out of the country may have its advantages, especially at tax time. If you are required to file a U.S. income tax return and are traveling or living outside the United States on April 15, you may be allowed an extension to file.

By filing Internal Revenue Service Form 4868, travelers can receive an extension until August 15 to file their federal income tax returns. Payment of additional taxes must accompany the request. Both Form 4868 and your payment must be filed by April 15.

U.S. residents in foreign countries usually qualify for automatic extensions of time to file until June 17. They must attach a statement to their tax returns explaining that their home and main place of business were outside the United States or Puerto Rico on April 15.

Visit your nearest U.S. Embassy or Consulate for forms or write to Internal Revenue Service, Forms Distribution Center, P.O. Box 25866, Richmond, VA 23289, USA.

Medical Expenses May Be Deductible

Prescription drugs or the annual dental check-up may be included in a medical expense deduction.

To deduct qualified medical expenses, taxpayers:

1. must itemize their deductions,
2. have unreimbursed medical costs that exceed 7.5 percent of their adjusted gross income, and
3. have paid for the allowable medical services.

The costs of most visits to the doctor and dentist qualify as allowable medical expenses. Medical insurance, special care equipment and cost of transportation to obtain medical care may be considered medical expenses. Also, all medical payments for dependents and spouse may be included.

A record of all medical expenses should be kept so that you can decide whether there are enough expenses to itemize or to support the deduction on the tax return. Some pharmacies will provide monthly and year-end statements for charge customers that distinguish between medical and non-medical expenses. For tax purposes, receipts, cancelled checks or a log are acceptable forms of recordkeeping.

For the specifics on medical expenses, order free IRS Publication 502, Medical and Dental Expenses. An order form is included in the tax package.

The service centers are listed in the tax package. The IRS needs your full name, signature, old and new addresses and your social security numbers to process the change of address. Filers of joint returns should provide this information for both spouses.

To order Form 8822, "Change of Address," call IRS at 1-800-TAX-FORM (1-800-829-3676).

Qualifying for The Earned Income Credit

You may be able to reduce your taxes if you have a child and your earned income is less than $20,264.

The credit may be as much as $953, depending on your earned income. You must file a tax return on Form 1040 or Form 1040A to receive the credit, and if you don't owe any tax, you probably will be sent a refund.

The qualifications to claim the earned income credit are:

- You must have a "qualifying" child living with you for more than 6 months of the year or full year for a foster child or dependent of a qualifying widow(er).

- Your filing status on your federal tax return must be one of the following: married filing jointly, qualifying widow(er) with dependent child or head of household. There are specific requirements for each filing status.

- You must live in the United States.
- You must have earned income during the year.

Earned income includes wages, salaries, tips, other employee compensation, net earnings from self-employment, and union strike benefits. It also includes anything of value—money, goods or services—that you get from your employer for services you performed, whether or not it is taxable. Examples include quarters and subsistence allowances received by military personnel or the rental value of a parsonage provided to a member of the clergy.

Earned income does not include interest, dividends, welfare benefits, veterans' benefits, pensions or annuities, alimony, social security payments, workers' compensation, unemployment benefits, taxable scholarships or fellowships.

- Both your earned income and your adjusted gross income must be below $20,264.

- You may not take the foreign income credit.
- Your return must be for a 12-month period.

If you think you will be eligible for the earned income credit in 1991, you may choose to get the credit in advance. The credit will be added regularly to your pay.

Further information on the earned income credit, including eligibility requirements, filing status requirements, and definition of "qualifying" child, is in Publication 17, Your Federal Income Tax. For a free copy of the publication, call toll-free 1-800-829-3676. If you need additional help with the earned income credit, call or visit your local IRS office.

Foreign Move May Mean Tax Write-Off

Many of the expenses associated with moving for employment purposes are deductible by U.S. citizens on their U.S. tax returns, providing they meet certain qualifying time, distance, and employment tests. For more information, get free IRS Publication 521, Moving Expenses, and Publication 54, Tax Guide For U.S. Citizens and Resident Aliens Abroad. Visit your nearest U.S. Embassy or Consulate for a copy, or write to Internal Revenue Service, Forms Distribution Center, P.O. Box 25866, Richmond, VA 23289, USA.

Cries for Help Heard at Home and Abroad

U.S. taxpayers outside the United States looking for help with their U.S. income taxes have several choices.

"One-on-one assistance is frequently provided by Internal Revenue Service employees or IRS-trained volunteers during the U.S. tax filing season. Taxpayers needing information to complete their forms may call any one of 13 IRS offices located in embassies and consulates throughout the world.

or they may call the International Taxpayer Service office in Washington, DC at 202-287-4301. The IRS maintains overseas offices in Bonn, Caracas, London, Mexico City, Nassau, Ottawa, Paris, Riyadh, Rome, Sao Paulo, Singapore, Sydney and Tokyo.

Also, speakers are often available from IRS offices to talk to groups about tax matters. Schedules and locations for tax help are usually available at U.S. Embassies or Consulates.

Free IRS tax assistance publications can be obtained by writing to Internal Revenue Service, Forms Distribution Center, P.O. Box 25866, Richmond, VA 23289, USA.

IRS Begins New Deposit Penalty System

Businesses that do not make federal payroll tax deposits on time are subject to a new penalty system.

The amount of penalty IRS charges varies with the length of time it takes to make the required federal tax deposit.

The new penalty system is four-tiered. Beginning in 1990, the failure-to-deposit penalty rates are as follows:

1. two percent for the first five days,
2. five percent for the 6th through the 15th day,
3. 10 percent for more than 15 days and
4. 15 percent if the deposit is not made within 10 days after IRS issues the first notice demanding payment.

A penalty is charged for delinquency or for depositing an insufficient amount. A penalty may also be assessed if the federal tax deposits are improperly mailed or delivered to IRS offices rather than to authorized depositories or Federal Reserve banks.

More information about payroll taxes is in Publication 937, Business Reporting. Call IRS toll-free 1-800-829-3676 to order your free copy.

Selecting Nutritional Supplements

Vitamin/mineral supplements with nearly identical ingredients may have very different prices. But there is not necessarily a relationship between quality and price. Some moderately priced preparations may be superior, on the basis of bioavailability, when compared to more costly products. Bioavailability refers to the release of nutrients in the intestine and their eventual delivery to the tissues. Poorly formulated supplements may dissolve incompletely, with fewer vitamins and minerals available to the body.

How should you select a vitamin/mineral supplement? We suggest that you ask us to recommend a product that is well formulated, is attractively priced, and has a history of releasing maximum quantities of nutrients into the bloodstream.

dinner featuring prime roast beef and champagne chicken will be served from 6 to 8 p.m. Before and during dinner, guests will be treated to the Dixieland sounds of "Basin Street."

At 8 p.m. the auctioneers gavel will fall for traditional style bidding. Items ranging from vacation weekends to appliances, Celtics and Bruins tickets will go up for sale to the highest bidder. The bidding will continue until all items are sold. The cost of the complete dinner/auction program is $35 per person. Wilmington police news

During the week ending March 26, Wilmington police officers responded to 30 alarms, made five arrests and one protective custody detention. One assault was investigated and other departments were assisted on four occasions.

Thirteen bank escorts were completed, three burglaries were investigated along with four reports of disorderly conduct and two domestic problems.

Seven larcenies were reported, three motor vehicles were reported stolen, medical assistance was rendered five times, six non-criminal complaints were taken and 12 public services were performed.

Four restraining orders were issued, six traffic accidents were investigated, two traffic services were taken care of, three trail bike complaints were logged, nine incidents of vandalism are still under investigation; four vehicles were recovered and alert neighbors reported 15 incidents of suspicious activity.

Arrests

Tuesday afternoon Officer Joe Harris arrested Sterling Boone of Lincoln Street after a traffic stop on Shawheen Avenue. Boone was charged with operating after suspension of his drivers license.

At 4 a.m. Thursday Officer Paul Chalifour drove to Chemsford to arrest Larry Wheeler, Jr. of Billerica on the basis of a default warrant issued by Woburn Court. Wheeler was held overnight to be taken to Woburn Court.

Early Friday morning Officer David Sugrue arrested Robert Molloy of Woburn on a warrant.

He was stopped on Shady Lane Drive, later bailed for Court Friday.

At 1:30 a.m. Saturday, Officer Chip Bruce arrested a Lynn man on Main Street near Rocco's. Michael T. MacCleary, 62 Bassett Street, 39, was charged with operating under the influence of alcohol, along with operating after the suspension of his license. He was bailed for an appearance in Woburn Court on Monday. He was then turned over to Revere officers on the basis of a warrant issued by that department.

At 4:40 a.m. Saturday Officer Paul Jepson arrested John M. Keiley, of Gowing Road, age 30, Keiley was charged with operating under the influence of liquor. He was bailed to appear in Woburn Court Monday.

Driveway scam

Every spring the department receives numerous complaints about illicit operators of driveway paving and/or sealing companies. These gypsy outfits travel around from state to state, with the warm weather we can expect them in this state. Watch out for the offers of left over paving material, or the unsolicited request to repave or seal your driveway. The typical scam might result in incomplete work or raising the cost far beyond the original estimate. Sometimes breaks have occurred during or shortly after the job was done. Legitimate operators will not object to your checking them out, or even calling the police station in an effort to check on them.

Fun Zone benefits from Star funding program

The Fun Zone Playground will be holding the second Star Share Certificate set of shopping days Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, April 2, 3 and 4. To participate, shoppers need to cut out the certificate found with this article and present it to the check-out person when they have completed their shopping. The playground will receive five percent of the total on the cash register receipt.

Shoppers may shop at any Star Market and are encouraged to share certificates with friends and relatives shopping at any Star Market.

Extra certificates may be picked up at any of the elementary schools in town.

The Fun Zone, a community playground, will be built on the grounds of the Woburn Street School. Primarily geared toward preschoolers to fifth graders, the Fun Zone is proud of its adapted nature. Adapted means that people using wheelchairs or crutches will be able to use the facilities. Ground cover is also chosen so that wheelchairs, strollers, etc. can easily move over it. Future plans for expansion of the Fun Zone include an adult fitness track and a preschool area.

Wilmington senior topicsCouncil meets Monday

The April Council on Aging meeting will be held in the function room of the Senior Citizen Center Monday, April 1 at 1 p.m. The Council will have as its guests, all the candidates seeking to be elected to the office of selectman, school committee, housing authority, redevelopment and moderator. They are all invited to allow the seniors a chance to listen and ask questions on how they feel about issues important to the elderly.

In America we have the privilege of voting our choice and every candidate is entitled to reach as many voters as possible. Speaking on why he/she wants our vote and what they will do for us if elected. Most of us cannot attend any speaking engagement of the candidate. By the Council inviting them to speak at the Senior Center, every senior has an opportunity to listen and if they want to question them before making their choice. Refreshments will be served after the meeting and a chance to speak to any of the candidates one-to-one if you wish. Try to attend the meeting. The election is only three weeks away.

Holiday dinners

This Thursday we will be delivering holiday dinners with all the trimmings to 100 of our shutin seniors. These meals are being paid for by Analog Devices and a donation from a senior in memory of her mother; for which we are most grateful.

Social April 2

The March/April therapeutic social will be held Tuesday, April 2. Buses will leave the Senior Center at 10:45 a.m. It is important to be at the center by 10 a.m. As each senior checks in they will be given a number of the table they will be sitting at. We do not want anyone trying to find a table when we arrive. The tables will be filled as seniors are checked off until all tables are filled. Husbands and wives should arrive early if they want to sit together. If you are canceling out, we must receive a call before Tuesday morning or you will be responsible for the entire cost of the social.

Bus rules

Our bus rules remain the same. Park cars as you arrive in the back of the parking lot along the fence. Go straight across. Then one car behind another up to the back of the building. No cars in the parking area beside the building, along the building, the hill side of the street. We will have four buses backing into the parking area. This is a very difficult to do. Therefore seniors are to enter the building when they arrive and remain inside the building until the buses are parked. At that time the handicapped bus will be boarded first. All handicapped seniors should be on this bus for their safety.

We should return to the Center around 4:30 p.m. Please remain on the bus until all buses have been parked. Do not drive your car from the parking lot until the buses have left the lot. If you are having someone pick up, please tell them to park at the Swain School parking lot, until the buses have left our lot. Remember accidents do not happen, they are caused. If we all follow the rules it will be an enjoyable day for all.

Medex

We all know how expensive the Medex policies are becoming. If the new increase Blue Cross is asking the legislature for this year goes through the cost of the policies will have increased 100 percent since 1986. With the tremendous increase allowed Blue Cross last year forced 30,000 seniors to either drop or downgrade their policy. Medex 3 will cost $1,130 this year if passed. There are more than 250,000 seniors who cannot afford the premium and will be asked to pay for prescription drugs and doctor and hospital deductibles out of their own pockets.

Seniors can't afford to pay the premiums but they also can't afford to be without insurance protection. The Mass. Senior Action Council has introduced a bill to the legislature to make the cost of all Medex policies affordable to the elderly. The number of the Bill is H-4170. Contact Rep. Miceli and Sen. Buell. Ask them to support this bill. We have a petition on the counter. Make sure you sign it to let Blue Cross know these policies are becoming out of the financial reach of all of us.

Unemployment in Massachusetts has reached an all time high. It's a recession if you're working, and a depression if you're not. That's why Tony supports a temporary five percent reduction in salary for any public employee earning more than $50,000.

Highway Bond Issue released

Representative James R. Miceli is pleased to announce that the 1991 Highway Bond Issue has been released and it includes two significant construction improvements to his district.

The bond issue includes the much needed traffic signalization at Rt. 38 and Rt. 1-495 north and southbound ramps which Representative Miceli had proposed. It also includes the resurfacing of Rt. 38 from Wilmington/Tewksbury Town line northerly.

Representative Miceli has been actively involved in securing these funds for this District. Through Rep. Miceli's efforts, these items were locked into the highway bond issue. In these fiscally trying times it has become increasingly difficult to obtain funding for such town projects.

Representative Miceli is continually working to ensure that his district is allotted the required funding for necessary town improvements.

Sports Comment

by Rick Cooke

Fun with Joe and Lou

Don't look now, but the Boston Gold Sox open their 1991 season April 8. I know I'll be glued to my television every time I am in need of a nice nap. There will be no steals, bunts or hit and runs, but there will be plenty of boring Joe Morgan quotes and lots of Lou Gorman blabber about what "a fine ballclub we have here."

They had better have a fine ballclub—with a bunch of fine young arms—with all the dough they are dishing out to these stiffies. Are you getting the feeling that I am sick of baseball? It's hard to believe that when I was growing up I loved the game. I lived and died with that Boston Red Sox team of 1967. Unfortunately, for me and fortunately for the Boston Red Sox, that is the year that the Old Towne team finally began winning and caught the limited imagination of the blind baseball faithful throughout New England.

Now, I am not a fair weather fan by any stretch of the imagination. But, one World Championship since the selling of Babe Ruth to finance Harry Frazee's play 'No No Nannette' would be nice. Just one championship.

And spare me all of the glowing reports coming out of spring training. Anyone who knows anything about sports knows that training sessions and practice games mean absolutely nothing.

So far the most interesting news coming out of spring training is the fact that Boggsie fell out of his truck and almost had his head mashed like a Cecilio Guante fastball. Oh, Cecilio finally arrived after all of his visa problems. Big deal—he can't pitch anyway.

Certain news items are a given with this Red Sox team, so I'll save you the trouble of going to that crowded, dirty ballpark with all the tradition of almost winning the big one. The 1991 Boston Gold Sox will hit plenty of homeruns, Roger Clemens will remind no one of Senator Bill Bradley, and the joint will be sold out with the exception of a couple of day games in early April.

The last time I attended a Red Sox game was four years ago and it was memorable for what went on in the stands and not on the playing field. I was honored with two freebees behind home plate and proceeded to spend the entire contest cheering for the California Angels. I was promptly reminded by two MIT students in front of me that this was "Boston." I wasted no time in telling the two boys in question that I was sitting in the choice seats, and that the only games that I didn't know exactly where I was came when I was sitting in the bleachers with about a thousand other people who thought that this just might be Braves Field.

My lasting memory of Friendly Fenway will be the bottom of the sixth inning during that same contest. I made a scheduled trip to the men's room and watched a young father tell his son to "just go, and don't touch anything." I'm sure the boy will remember his first trip to a ballpark men's room as more frightening than anything appearing in the Friday the 13th series.

My one wish for this upcoming season would be to trade Randy Kutcher's salary for a year's worth of clean men's rooms (and ladies rooms, for that matter—I'm sure they can't be that much better) at Fenway Park.

But, what fun would this year's Gold Sox be without those men's rooms, cold hot dogs and no place to park your car? And let's not forget that fourth division championship—but no World Championship—in six years. Now, that's fun.

College Notebook by Mike Stuart

UNLV will complete mission

After a tremendous weekend of college basketball, only four teams are left standing in the limelight, just waiting for a National Championship.

In the opening tipoff on Saturday, it's Kansas vs North Carolina. The student vs. his mentor and tradition vs. more tradition. The Jayhawks looked to be on a mission last weekend, thus returning to the level that brought them a National Championship back in 1988.

The Tar Heels are making their first trip to the Big Dance since the days of Worthy and Jordan in 1982 when they won a close one against Georgetown. This game will be decided on which team can effectively score from within the paint. I happen to like the Jayhawks' interior game, so I feel that they will win, 83-77.

If one team has a chance to beat UNLV, I have to think that it's Duke. With Lattener working the inside game, the Hill boys and Hurley on the outside with Coach K. getting one whole week to prepare for the Rebels, the Blue Devils have a realistic shot at ending the 45 game winning streak of Tark's Sharks.

Duke must run when they have the opportunities and not when the Runnin' Rebels want them to. The Blue Devils must also return to the defensive zone extremely fast, as Vegas tends to launch outlet passes that the NBA couldn't handle. If Coach K can devise a game plan and have his kids follow it, well, it could happen but whatever you do, don't bet on it.

That brings a Kansas vs. UNLV final. If one team ever was on a mission, really, it's the Rebels. Blessed with a chance to repeat as champs has brought fire to their eyes and no one, not even the NCAA, will be able to deny the Rebels the crown in 1991. Final score—UNLV 95 Kansas 84. Next week a preseason look at the National League.

Outdoors column

Apologies to Mass. Audubon

by Bill Conlon
Whew! Talk about a zinger!

On Wednesday morning, after the Outdoors Column had already been "pasted up" on the page, I received a call from Faye Rapoport, media specialist with Mass. Audubon, who wanted to refute a few points that were made in this space March 6.

And she gave me an earful -- but in a pleasant, laughing sort of way. Faye was very nice about it, which is a refreshing change of pace. All too often, when somebody doesn't agree with a story that appears in the paper and calls to complain, you can hold the phone at arms' length and still hear it without difficulty.

In the March 6 Column I quoted Paul Kress, legislative watchdog for the Middlesex County League of Sportsmen, who was speaking at Tewksbury Rod & Gun. Paul had a few things to say about the Mass. Audubon Society, and also taking a swing at the Society was Tom Hayes of Mass. Trappers.

Faye didn't go quite so far as to say they were hallucinating, but she certainly disagreed with what was said about Mass. Audubon.

Paul said the state Attorney General is looking for letters from any Mass. Audubon Society members, as the AG defends against a lawsuit. The AG, he said, is looking for any paperwork to support a contention of an anti-hunting bias by the Mass. Audubon Society. Paul said the suit was filed by the Mass. chapter of the Society their own, without any approval from the national organization. That's what he said.

Faye disagreed. She said that the Mass. Audubon Society has no such lawsuit underway that she's heard of, and that Massachusetts Audubon Society is not part of the national organization. The local chapter was formed before the national group, she said. They aren't parent-child.

As for an anti-hunting stance, she said MAS holds no such position. "We're certainly not a sportsmen's organization," she said, but added that MAS is very "broad-minded" about hunting, with large numbers of sportsmen as members. Okay.

Paul said that MAS pays a State-house lobbyist some $65,000 for work on anti-hunting legislation.

Faye laughed at that one, saying MAS is non-profit, and that there is no such high-paid lobbyist on their staff, only a legislative liaison who would love such a hefty paycheck.

As for anti-hunting legislation, Faye said the only two items MAS is taking a stance on is an amendment to a bill now in the works that would allow bear hunting in the Bay State, but would make it illegal for telemetry equipped dogs to run free chasing bears. She said the bill itself would outlaw all hunting of bears, but the MAS amendment will allow it to continue, but without the dogs.

She said MAS also favors keeping the current ban on Sunday hunting, so that people can have a day of the week without hunters in the woods.

The second stance is fair enough, as I've heard a number of hunters say the same thing about Sundays.

Now, Tom Hayes lumped MAS and Sudbury Valley River Trust in the same sentence, and had nothing nice to say about either. However, I didn't quote Tom very much. Just as well, it looks.

Funny, but the things said at the meeting about Audubon being anti-hunting didn't make sense to me at the time, now that I think about it. Whenever you see a portrait of J.J. Audubon, he's got a shotgun under one arm. How do you think Mr. A did all those bird portraits? On the wing? Afraid not, kids. He knocked them down, then painted at leisure.

Please don't shoot the messenger. I just reported what was said at the meeting, and now I've heard from both sides. My sincere apologies to the Mass. Audubon Society for not getting both sides squared away in time to print them together. Head-on collisions don't work well when the two sides are a month apart.

And I've got a bone to pick with Paul Kress, next time I we meet. If you meet him first, kindly see that he gets a copy of this, would you?

And thanks for calling, Faye. I'll be in touch.

Letter to the sports editor

Cougars enjoyed fine season

Dear Rick:

Your brief recap of Austin Prep's defeat to Archbishop Williams High School in the Division II EMass Final was certainly factual in that Austin was "whipped" 9-3 by a "red hot team."

The tone of your commentary, however, in the use of the word finally sounds a bit like you're gloating over the loss by the Cougars.

For the record Mr. Cooke, Austin's Varsity Hockey Team had a fine season, including beating Archbishop Williams twice during the regular season and finishing second to perennial power Matignon in the tough Catholic Central League.

Going into the tournament, Austin was ranked number 10 out of 24 teams selected by the MIAA. Through hard work Austin made it into the final game by several come from behind victories.

Overall, it was an exciting year for the Cougar hockey team and they should be congratulated for a successful campaign even though they ended up on the wrong end of the score in the final game.

In the past, your paper has done a commendable job in publicizing the athletic and academic achievements of the local schools and Austin Prep and it's community appreciates the coverage it has received as well.

In the future for the benefit of your readers and the participants in school athletic events, please try to keep in mind to balance your reporting and find some words that also set a positive tone for the achievements of our young student athletes.

Sincerely,
Robert F. Kelley

FRAGRANT APPEAL

Cleopatra may have filled a room knee deep in rose petals in an effort to attract Mark Anthony, but today's woman is not so concerned with using fragrance to gain the attention of the opposite sex. In fact, fewer than 25 percent of the 500 women (aged 25-35) surveyed by the Opinion Research Corporation admitted to using fragrance to attract a man. Sixty-three percent of those surveyed said, however, that they consciously wear scent to please the men in their lives. For that matter, fully 88 percent of those polled said that they wear fragrance to please themselves. Only 21 percent applied perfume or cologne to impress others. In light of the survey, fragrance is seen less as a weapon in the battle of the sexes and more of a personal accessory which is used for one's own pleasure.

Finding which scent, style or look is best for you can be a difficult choice. Let us help you with expert advice at top quality professionals to make your look one you will love. THE MANAGEMENT TEAM is ready to drive into the future with the new Pinewood Gardens Driving range. Pictured from left are: Ron Hill, Joanne Arsenault and David Arsenault as they get ready to address the area's golf needs. Along with the 300-yard driving range, the complex will also have a 19-hole Blue Chip Mini-Golf Course, and 15 batting cages.

Golf driving ranges reappear on the scene

By DOUGLAS WOOD-BOYLE

Ranges are coming back in style as a center for family entertainment and practice for duffers.

Driving ranges that is. Golf driving ranges.

As Billerica's Dean Jenkins, owner of the Sweet Spot, said "Golf has become more expensive over the last couple of years. People come to practice on the ranges and make the most of their time on the golf course."

Jenkin's cited figures put out by the National Golf Foundation. The Association claims that by the year 2,000 the country will need 15,000 golf courses to handle all those that want to play.

David Arsenault, owner of the Pinewood Driving Range, which will be opening this week in North Reading, sees golf ranges as a family affair. Tying in with that, Arsenault has built his driving range on property abutting the Arsenault family's Pinewood Garden Nursery.

"Mother's can be picking out flower's for the garden, while dad is practicing his driving and the kids can be playing the 19-hole mini-golf course or using the batting cages," he said.

The mini-golf course is under construction and is due to open about April 15. The batting cages are due to be installed by the end of June.

Complete family entertainment is the way to go, according to both Jenkins and Arsenault.

Jenkins likes the fact that his place is busy with a lot of family business. "It is good that people are trying to do more family activities. And Golf is a good family activity."

Jenkins credits the game's popularity to the fact that people of all ages can play. He added that another factor is that alcohol is not involved.

A friend and loyal customer, John Bender, said "I had by-pass surgery three-years ago. Since then Golf has been good to me."

He added that it helps to take the pressure off from daily activities.

FM TALK: Our far-flung correspondent is away this week, until his return another edition of those off-beat tidbits on American history to keep you readers busy.

According to William Morris and Mary Morris, co-editors of the Harper Dictionary of Contemporary Usage, editors of the second edition of the 1934 Merriam-Webster dictionary inserted a word that does not exist to find out if anybody would catch the deliberate error. The nonexistent word was "dord" which the editors described as a noun, and it appeared on page 771, between the words Dorcopis and dore. The "Error" remained in the dictionary through several printings, but then was finally dropped after new editors took over.

One of the most glaring political mixed metaphors came out of the 1936 presidential campaign. The Democrats charged the Republicans with being anti-Semitic. The Republican campaign manager, John Daniel Miller Hamilton, responded, says Ernest Sutherland Bates and Alan Williams, in their book "American Hurly-Burly," by saying the Democrats were deliberately attempting "to throw a dust cloud when they know their ship is sinking."

Samuel Rosenman, close confidant of Franklin Roosevelt, and author of "Working with Roosevelt," tells in his book about the time FDR attempted to clear his conscience after breaking a 1932 campaign promise. The promise was this: that he, Roosevelt, lie to the people and tell them that he would not be able to reduce the federal budget. But on October 10 of that year, at a park in Pittsburgh, Roosevelt did tell the public that he would reduce the federal budget. After he was elected, Roosevelt was unable to lower the budget, and his opponents never let him forget that speech he made in Pittsburgh. Roosevelt called upon Rosenman to write a speech, to be delivered during the 1936 presidential campaign at the same park in Pittsburgh, that would clarify the discrepancies between his promise and his performance. Rosenman carefully thought over the situation, then concluded to FDR that the best advice he could give the president was "to deny categorically that you ever made it."

Seymour V. Connor, author of "Texas: A History," writes in his book about one of the oldest fellows ever to find himself in the political arena. His name was W. Lee "Pappy" O'Daniel, and in 1941 O'Daniel defeated a young Lyndon B. Johnson in the U.S. Senate race from Texas. How O'Daniel got to that point is what makes his story so interesting.

O'Daniel was the sales manager of a Texas flour mill, and in an effort to sell flour, he formed a four-man hillbilly group known as the Light Crust Doughboys. O'Daniel and his three-man back-up singers and musicians appeared regularly on a statewide radio program, singing country tunes, giving advice to housewives and preaching morality. Of course, they also sold O'Daniel's flour within ten years. O'Daniel became so successful that he eventually owned his own flour company, and his radio show had made him a personality throughout the states. In 1938, with the governor's race approaching, a listener wrote in, suggesting that O'Daniel run for the office. As a lark, O'Daniel decided to run. With no campaign headquarters, no staff, no political experience, and a platform that consisted of the Ten Commandments and the Golden rule, O'Daniel eliminated eleven Democratic opponents during the primary by taking 50 percent of the vote, and in November of that year, he crushed his Republican opponent, 473,526 to 10,940. O'Daniel was reelected governor two years later, then went on to defeat LBJ in the U.S. Senate race.

About the towns

By PHYLLIS NISSEN

WANTED - Reading Public Library people are looking for donations of Henry Miller's "Tropic of Cancer" and "Tropic of Capricorn," in paperback or hardcover. They'd also appreciate 1990 or 1991 computer programming textbooks and bestselling software manuals.

NORTH READING - Established in 1909 as a tuberculosis hospital with a capacity of 150 beds, the John T. Berry Rehabilitation Center in North Reading will close after its current clients are transferred to other programs recommended by the state Department of Mental Retardation, during the next 18 months.

According to the North Reading Transcript, current philosophy is moving away from residential institutions such as the Berry and toward placement of clients in community programs privately contracted through the state.

WILMINGTON - April 5th marks the deadline for nominations for Wilmington's annual "Good Guy" or gal award, bestowed upon an outstanding citizen who gives of him or herself to make the community a better place in which to live. The award will be presented at the 23rd annual "Good Guy" banquet on May 11th.

Send names and your reasons for nominating them to the "Good Guy" Committee, P.O. Box 387, Wilmington, MA.

STONEHAM - In anticipation of leaves being banned in normal trash pickup as of January 1992, Stoneham Town Administrator Teddy Ryan is recommending that the town set aside four weeks this fall - and four weeks again the following spring - for curbside leaf bag pickup.

In related news, the Stoneham Recycling Committee has notified the Selectmen that as of July, the committee will no longer oversee the very successful volunteer recycling center on Stevens Street. The committee had recommended a curbside recycling program but the Selectmen did not act upon the recommendation.

WINCHESTER - Preparatory to a public hearing and the drafting of a state-required five-year Winchester Open Space and Recreation Plan, the Winchester Conservation Committee recently surveyed citizens on how they rate the importance of issues such as pollution in Winchester's waterways, the clean-up of hazardous waste sites in town, the importance of town-owned open space, and attitudes toward lack of a town-owned swimming area.

SENIOR CENTER - Weather or not, you are invited to join the folks from Reading's Somerset Nursing Home Adult Day Program and their mascot Corey as they walk to raise money for Multiple Sclerosis research on the Super Cities Walk in April. Call Thea Gaudette at Somerset for more details or contact Super Cities Walk Headquarters, Multiple Sclerosis Society, 400-1 Totten Pond Road, Waltham, MA 02154 - (617) 890-4990.

Corey, by the way, has become an integral part of therapy throughout Somerset.

Don't overlook those many valuable tax deductions

Before you sign your 1990 tax return, take a second look at your list of deductions. According to Henry F. Camacho, CPA and the Massachusetts Society of Certified Public Accountants, Inc., many taxpayers prepare their returns hastily and thus cheat themselves out of tax deductions to which they are legally entitled. Here's a quick list of some tax breaks you may have overlooked in your haste.

Medical Deductions

Just because medical expenses are deductible only to the extent that they exceed 7.5% of your adjusted gross income, don't assume you cannot qualify. Take the time to add up all unreimbursed medical expenses for the diagnosis, cure, treatment, and prevention of disease. In totaling your unreimbursed expenses, don't forget about those expenses relating to your spouse and dependents.

Consider, too, such commonly overlooked expenses as a wheelchair, crutches, hearing aids, courses taken to learn braille, and eyeglasses. And if you make certain physical alterations to your home for medical reasons, such as widening doors to accommodate a wheelchair, the cost may likewise be considered a medical expense.

Volunteer Expenses

If you volunteered as an aide to a qualified charity in 1990, you may be entitled to deduct a number of expenses associated with these commitments. For instance, you may deduct the cost of travel to and from meetings, whether you drove your car or used public transportation. Other deductible expenses include the cost and care of any special uniform you were requested to wear as a volunteer. Only your actual expenses related to charitable work may be deducted. You may not deduct the cost of time spent (as measured against lost income).

Miscellaneous Expenses

Most miscellaneous expenses are deductible to the extent that they exceed 2% of adjusted gross income (AGI). Once you pass that hurdle, you can deduct a wide variety of expenses, including the cost of professional subscriptions, job-related education, union dues and uniforms, job-hunting expenses, resume services, professional fees to accountants, and various unreimbursed business expenses.

Points Paid To Obtain A Primary Mortgage

If you obtained a mortgage to purchase a primary residence last year and paid any points up front with personal funds, you may be able to deduct them in full on your 1990 return. On the other hand, if you added the points to your mortgage, you will have to amortize the deduction over the life of the mortgage.

Rental Losses

If you own rental property, you are probably aware that losses from such property can only be deducted from passive income. However, if you actively participated in renting your property, and your AGI is $100,000 or less, you can deduct losses of up to $25,000 from your regular income. For owners with an AGI above $100,000, the deduction may be limited or totally eliminated.

These are just a few of the deductions you may have overlooked. For more detailed information, contact your CPA.

The Massachusetts Society of Certified Public Accountants, Inc. is the state professional organization of certified public accountants with more than 7,500 members in public practice, industry, government and education.

Area driving range

From S-1

Jenkins said that he remembers when there was a driving range in almost every community. Now there are only a few of them.

According to Jenkins, the rising land values drove a lot of the former ranges out of business. He thinks that now some property owners are putting in ranges as a way to keep their property.

Arsenault is a good example of this. His range is built on property that was unbuildable because it is surrounded by wetlands.

"The land is in a flood plain and has a lot of restrictions," he said. "We thought that the complex would be good for the town."

According to Arsenault, the property, located at a gateway to North Reading will be well-landscaped.

"We did nothing to the land other than cosmetic changes. There is nothing out there that will damage the environment," Arsenault said.

Jenkins is a former professional hockey player (right wing) with the Los Angeles Kings organization and the Hershey Bears of the Boston Bruins' organization. After his retirement three-years ago, he went into partnership with his father, Edward, and opened the unique double-decker driving range.

At the time, he was looking for Golf related business to get involved in.

He noticed that ranges were starting to gain in popularity around the country and was able to obtain the land he has now.

Jenkins thinks that the increase in the game is due to the fact that more blue collar workers and women are getting interested in it.

His plans call for future changes to include a practice sand trap, a pro-shop, a restaurant, batting cages and maybe a pool hall.

Right now both the Pinewood and the Sweet Spot have 300-yard driving ranges and the tees at both places are made of astro-turf to give the golfer a better feel for the swing.

Roving From S-1

War II and Its Aftermath," author Quincy Howe reveals this startling revelation: beginning ten years before the surprise attack on Pearl Harbor, the following question appeared on the final exam at the Japanese Naval Academy: "How would you carry out a surprise attack on Pearl Harbor?" The query remained a part of the exam right up until the year of the actual attack, but according to Howe, it is not known whether any of the Japanese naval cadets' suggestions were used in the real attack on Pearl Harbor.

In Time magazine, on November 16, 1962, an article appeared on Eleanor Roosevelt. According to the article, Mrs. Roosevelt, during World War II, loved to visit wounded American servicemen worldwide. Visiting a particular South Pacific hospital resulted in one of the most embarrassing events of her life. Mrs. Roosevelt charged into a ward at the hospital and began to kiss the servicemen confined there. The first lady's escorts could not stop her in time. The ward, it turned out, was where servicemen who had contracted venereal disease were kept!

One final thought to mull over: Now that the war in the Gulf is over, consider the cost of numerous other American wars: the Revolutionary War, $147 million; the Civil War (Union), $8 billion; World War I, $66 billion; World War II, $560 billion; the Korean War, $70 billion; and the Vietnam War, $121.5 billion.

Make it a good week.

Happy
EASTER

Jenkins said that he provides a brand new Spaulding driving balls for his golfers.

"I don't believe in reclaimed balls," he said.

At the Pinewood, golfers will find all new 1-woods with metal handles. Arsenault's manager, Ron Hill, an avid golfer (12 handicap), said that the split between new and reclaimed balls will be 50-50.

Pinewood will be promoting not only a family spirit but also a community spirit with their complex. Arsenault said that he is promoting the use of the complex for civic and charitable events. To add to this he plans on having a small picnic area.

The mini-golf course will be done with a different garden theme on every hole. Arsenault said that as people get ideas for their gardens they can go next door to the nursery and get the necessary plants.

At the Sweet Spot people can get some instruction from Jenkins, who said he has brought his former 15-handicap down to a six or from his brother Joel, now with the University of Lowell Golf Team, formerly with the University of Jacksonville.

Jenkins opens the range during the summer mornings for use as a teaching clinic to young golfers that want to learn the game.

You might also see some celebrities playing there as friends from Jenkins' hockey days have been known to show up. For his opening, Jenkins had a Boston Bruins day and since then former Bruins Gordie Klusak, present Bruin Al Peterson, and WBZ radio personality Dave Maynard have been spotted at the range.

The double decker factor, gives the Sweet Spot a total of 26-tees. Jenkins said that the serious golfers prefer the lower level. However, those that are new to the game seem to prefer the upper level because they can keep a better eye on the flight of the ball. "They get more out of it because they are not hitting ground balls all the time."

Jenkins has his range open from March to November, seven days a week as the weather allows, from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. In this type of weather he advises people to call first.

Although it was a little chilly on the day of the interview, most of the bottom level was filled and some people were driving from the top level.

Balls can be purchased for $3 to $5. The $5 basket holds about 95 balls.

At Pinewood the prices will be $3 for 30-balls, $4 for 50-balls and $8 for 120-balls.

Arsenault said that the grand opening for the complex will be in mid-May.

"We'll have a lot of fun on that day," he said.

The hours of the 30-tees will be 8 a.m. to dusk, seven days-a-week, all year as the weather permits.

MUSEUM ANNOUNCES ATTENDANCE RECORDS

The opening of two major exhibits at the Museum of Our National Heritage have drawn record breaking crowds. Smoke Signals: Cigarettes, Advertising and the American Way of Life and The Confectioner's Art attracted more than 9,000 people to the Museum in the month of February.

The figure represents nearly a 300% increase in attendance over last year and is one of the highest monthly totals in the Museum's 16-year history. The Museum is one of the few Massachusetts institutions with a free admission policy.

"Visitors are coming from all over the region to see these two shows," said Museum Director Clement M. Silvestro. "Many are first time visitors to the Museum who are surprised to find such a rich cultural resource in the area. We are delighted that these provocative exhibits have been so attractive to the public. We hope they will return again to sample future exhibits and programs."

Smoke Signals: Cigarettes, Advertising, and the American Way of Life examines how changes in technology and marketing have dramatically influenced American life since the 1880s. More than 425 objects on view illustrate how advertising spurred the rapid transformation of American culture. The Confectioner's Art, an exhibition of more than 200 culinary fantasies, introduces the pre-eminent confectioner's of our time, showcases their extraordinary artistry, and explores the cultural significance of sweets through the ages.

The Museum of Our National Heritage is located at 33 Marrett Road, Lexington, at the corner of Rte 2A and Massachusetts Avenue. Admission to the Museum and parking are free. School notes

by phyllis nissen

—Stoneham High graduation ceremonies have been moved from Sunday, June 9th to Friday evening, June 7th at the request of senior class officers, after being reviewed by the high school staff and approved by Principal Thomas Ryan and the School Committee.

Consequences taken into account of that move were student safety, convenience for parents and relatives, and comparative costs.

—Members of Reading's Joshua Eaton Elementary School's Enrichment Committee are looking for "scientists" of all kinds to participate in its Science Fair on Friday, May 10th. Lunch and a stipend are provided.

For more info, contact Joanne Kesler at (617)944-6696.

—Under the supervision of teacher Virginia Laats, Winchester High Home Economics juniors and seniors are running a child study lab open free of charge to 12 children, ages three to four-and-a-half.

Designed to give students firsthand experience in caring for and observing preschoolers, the eight sessions meet from 9 to 10:30 a.m. on different days of the week, according to the high school's rotating schedule.

—With Woburn in the process of revitalizing its high school curriculum, Assistant Superintendent for Curriculum Louise Nolan recently sent a survey to department heads at about 40 "local" private and public colleges and universities, asking about the sorts of things prospective college students should be studying.

Half the institutions answered, reflecting a growing trend in education toward thinking skills and a growing need for basic skills.

According to Nolan in the Woburn edition of the Daily Times Chronicle, the college staff indicated that too many English teachers correct essays and research papers for content, ignoring grammar errors with the result that students never learn how to write correctly or receive criticism; students who wish to study the sciences should be taking more math; foreign language students need to spend more time speaking than reading or writing; math students need to solve more word problems; and knowledge of word processing is a necessity for incoming freshmen.

The colleges also recommended seven years of history, half American and much European, with some flexibility given to the history of developing nations because the story there changes so quickly.

—"Since the After School Activities Program is committed to provide our children with a safe, dependable and reliable after-school environment, no class will be cancelled should the instructor be unable to attend," says the publicity on Wakefield's Greenwood and Yeuell Schools after-school programs. "Should such an event occur, a substitute instructor shall be provided or the children shall be placed in alternative classes for the day."

The successful program is operated by Perry Verge of the Greenwood and Yeuell schools and Thomas Merchant, Director of Wakefield Community Education.

CATCHING SPRING FEVER CAN HURT

"In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love." If Alfred, Lord Tennyson had lived in the health conscious 90's, he might have written that our "fancy" often turns to thoughts of getting into shape after a long, sedentary winter. And therein lies some potential hazards to our health, cautions Glenn Dudley, M.D. of the Woburn Walk-In Center.

"As the days grow longer and warmer, spring fever runs rampant," says Dr. Dudley. "We feel restless after being cooped up inside all winter and decide to launch an exercise program. Unfortunately, too many of us try to do too much, too soon, and end up getting injured before we really get started."

To reduce the risk of injury and help you maintain your good intentions, Dr. Dudley offers these tips for starting a springtime exercise program.

"First and foremost, don't over do it," he says. "Even if you think you're in pretty good shape, start any new exercise at a relatively low intensity and gradually increase your exertion over several weeks."

"If you are 45 or over, you should consult your physician before starting an exercise program. You should also see a doctor if you're 35 or older and have any risk factors for heart disease such as high blood pressure or cholesterol levels, if you smoke or are very overweight, he advises.

"No pain, no gain" is a myth, says Dr. Dudley. "Pain is a warning sign; if you have continuing pain during exercise, stop, don't resume until you can do so painlessly. And beware of any exercise instructor who says that exercise must hurt or 'burn' in order to work."

"The muscle soreness you feel after exercise is another matter," he explains. "After any unaccustomed, strenuous exercise, you may experience painful stiffness that typically sets in a day or two after working out can last a week or more. You can help minimize this by doing adequate warming up and cooling down."

"Stretching is not a good way to begin your workout," warns Dr. Dudley. "Stretching cold muscles can injure them. Whether you're running, playing a sport or lifting weights, warm up first, then stretch. A five to ten minute warm up is usually enough."

"After exercise, be sure to cool down. Slow down gradually and stretch gently for another five to ten minutes. This will help reduce muscle stiffness. Never stand still right after vigorous exercise."

Dr. Dudley also advises wearing adequate and appropriate footwear. "Wearing improper or worn out shoes puts added stress on your hips, knees, ankles and feet - the four places that account for up to 90% of all sports injuries."

"Finally, it's important to remember that you get the most out of exercise when it becomes a life-long habit, especially when it's combined with other good habits such as avoiding cigarettes, controlling blood pressure and eating sensibly."

STUDY TOUR OF IRELAND AT MCC

The annual study tour of Ireland led by Middlesex Community College faculty member Ray Shea is scheduled for July 18-30. This year, the 12 days will be spent in Dublin, Sligo, the Aran Islands, and the west coast counties of Donegal, Cork and Kerry.

Participants are welcome to join the tour on a credit or non-credit basis. A deposit on the airfare portion of the total transportation and accommodation costs of $1,839 is required by March 31. For further information, contact Professor Shea at (617) 275-8910, Ext. 4729 or (508) 369-6233.

ANTHONY MANCONI

Have you ever seen a meteor streak across a cool summer night's sky? It illuminates the heavens for a moment, then in an instant the meteor is gone and forgotten. Many people's lives are like that. They are in the limelight in a burst of popularity for a brief period of time, then fade away into oblivion. There are other people (I am happy to say) who, unlike a meteor, are remembered and never forgotten because of their generous charitable contributions.

Mr. John "Jack" Shaughnessy is whom I have in mind. Without fanfare or publicity, this genuine humanitarian has been a benefactor of many charities in general and Boston College High School in particular. Bill MacNeill, vice president for development at BC High, sums it all up in one sentence. "Jack Shaughnessy has done more for local charities over the past 35 years than any man I know." A meteor flashes across the night sky and is soon forgotten - but - not Mr. John "Jack" Shaughnessy. Woodchips salutes you.

My late Uncle John Shea, however, had an impediment. He couldn't seem to get his hands out of his pockets when contributions were asked for any charity. It isn't any wonder then why all who knew Uncle John were surprised when he made out a check for $100 for the family of a dearly departed member of his longshoreman's crew. When I brought to his attention that he didn't sign the check, Uncle John whispered, "Not so loud, stupid! I want to make my gift anonymously."

Little Jack Horner sat in a corner, watching the girls go by. Along came a beauty, Jack said, "Hi cutie," and that's how he got his black eye! I asked Ryan Powers, "What's your cat's name?" "Ben Hur," Ryan replied. "Gee, that's an odd name for a cat, how did you pick such a name for it?" Ryan smiled then said, "Well, we called it Ben until he had kittens!"

I have a cousin who is a "work-a-holic." Every time he hears the word "work" he gets drunk. Many a man who fell in love with a dimple made the mistake of marrying the whole girl. Life is fragile folks, please handle it with care.

Personality Winners: Ginny Cosgrove, Gina DeSantis, Lianne McAuliffe, Stacey LaCrocchia, Julie Robinson, Marissa Volpe, Tina Kelly, Susan Sweet, Andrea Currier and Cara Scalese, all of Wilmington; Susan Sellon, Judy Limonciello, Ruth Files, Sally Miraglia, Ann Carman, Doreen Schiavone, Judy Halley, Sarah Alker, Mary Smith and Bea Campo, all of Woburn; Matthew Pellegrino and his friends Firefighters Steve Yetman, Mike Bibbey, Gerry Letendre, Al Fay, Lenny Sawyer and Ed McLean, all of Burlington; David Quincy, Al Dyson, Jim McDonough, George Larkin, John Buckley, Marjorie (Trenholm) Martin, Helen Barnes, Les French, Alice (Olsen) Moore and Maryalice (Conley) Moore, all of Stoneham; Frank Fallon, Jack Driscoll (both of the Reading Post Office), Adria M. Canty, Thomas W. Carlo, Jeffrey M. Dorandi, Paul Gistafson, Randall W. Lloyd, Cathryn M. O'Connor, Michelle A. Rossetta, Derek J. Sullivan, Richard J. Porter and Jon E. Rothrock, all of Reading; Officer Thomas Coogan, the beautiful Jacki Coogan, Brendan P. Brown, Michael P. Coombs, Denise M. Doucette, Marie E. Gerrigno, Danielle F. Powell, Edward H. Seabury, Michael D. Smith, Nicole A. Waldron and Mary E. West, all of Wakefield.

Also, Michael S. Abrams, Orissa D. Baker, Eric J. Ewald, Denise A. Finneran, Scott J. Landry, Daniel K. Kinsbourne, Adam F. Keats, Russell A. Hunter, Katherine A. Martinelli, Ann M. Mueller, Brian D. Mullen, Jan T. Pyro and Stephanie L. Smith, all of Winchester; Master Sgt. Kent A. Jenkins, Navy Lt. j.g. Stephen M. Gale, Bernard and Shirley Jenkins, Melissa Chinchillo, Amy Fitzpatrick, Larry and Maureen Bedard, Tim Bedard, Mary Horgan, Elaine Kerrigan and Matt Freitag, all of Tewksbury; Penny Mitchell, Richard DeStefano, Kevin Ring, Susan Conrad, Janet Mallett, Scott

Conrad, Cindy Mallett, Lindsey "Polito, Librarian Linda Lally, Kelly Canavan, Michael O'Neil, Kristen Mootrey and Rene Keith, all of North Reading; Ori and Cecelia Vegetante, Guy Festa, Office Tom Roarke and Susan Rubbico, all of Lynnfield.

My Aunt Nora told Ben Dent (a church sexton) that she had to wait so long for confession that he should try to have one confessional for six sins or less. Joseph Vega was mowing his lawn last summer when a well dressed stranger sauntered by and stopped to observe. "Nice house you have here, must be worth at least $80,000." Joe stopped pushing the lawn mower and exclaimed, "Man, you must be 'nuts.' This is Reading and this house with two new bathrooms recently installed is worth $200,000 if it's worth a dime! By the way are you looking for a place to buy?" "Not exactly," smiled the stranger, "I'm the new appraiser re-assessing the houses in this neighborhood." Folks, be very careful discussing values with anyone wearing a Brooks Brothers suit.

The music had just stopped at one of those modern teen dances where each partner twists around individually. Dennis Tully was walking toward the sidelines when a girl rushed to him and thanked him for the dance. "Wait a minute," Dennis replied, "I wasn't dancing with you, I was just trying to get by you to get to the Coke machine." My friend Tony Stack is one of the most charitable persons I know. (A trait common to the Irish.) He contributes to any and every cause. He is willing to help out at "soup kitchens" and volunteers his time for any charity. He does this without fanfare, publicity or glory (as a matter of fact, I'll have a hard time explaining writing this Chip to him.)

Late one evening Bob Giguere answered his door bell. It was Larry Flynn who said, "Bob, would you like to contribute $10 to help the old ladies' home?" "Good grief," Bob shouted, "What the heck are the old ladies doing out this late at night?" Folks, a vegetable garden is a thing of beauty and a job forever. Another thing, folks, marriage is like looking at a packet of flower seeds in February. The glorious colors pictured are sometimes NOT what you get in June. Kathy just read this and said, "You aint kidding. I married you because I thought you were well off!" I don't dare tell her that I was well off but after I said, "I Do," it was too late to do anything about it!

Folks, it's a good thing I have such wonderful proof readers at the Reading office. My spelling is atrocious and believe me, I wouldn't recognize a "split infinitive" or a "dangling participle" if I stumbled over them. So, thanks typesetters, proof readers and anyone else who helps make this column readable.

Kathy would like to know "What make the Tower of Pisa 'lean'?" She just finished a three-week diet and she lost 21 days!

MOVIES

"The Long Walk Home" "Guilty by Suspicion"

"The Long Walk Home" Starring Whoopi Goldberg, Sissy Spacek. Directed by Richard Pearce. Produced by Howard W. Koch, Jr., Dave Bell. Screenplay by John Cork. Rated PG.

A person is lucky if they catch one movie every couple of years that is filled with the raw honesty of "The Long Walk Home." It's an emotional feast for those of us long since forced to endure movies that never balance their casts with a true representation of the minority populations in this country.

"The Long Walk Home" is not only an effective history lesson, but it shows you just how much power white males had in this country 30 years ago - and the methods they used to hang onto that power. It is a movie about the battle of the sexes as much as it is about racial subjugation, because women are seen as the healing, non-violent catalyst in what was an extremely turbulent and dangerous chapter of American life.

Rosa Parks stirred up the beginnings of the bus boycott in Montgomery, Alabama in 1955. But this movie is not about Parks, or other memorable names from the era, such as Dr. Martin Luther King. Instead, screenwriter John Cork illustrated the boycott via the relationship of a black maid (Whoopi Goldberg) and the upper-middle class woman she serves (Sissy Spacek).

Slowly, thoughtfully, we watch as their relationship changes from that of servant/master to one of mutual respect. These two are never pals - that would have been too far a jump from reality. But as Goldberg's Odessa sticks to her convictions, hoping her children will see a better life, Spacek's character finds a voice within her that allows her to stand up to a domineering husband who is terrified at the idea of change within his white bread hierarchy.

The story and direction are a marvel of economy. Events outside the microcosm of these women's world filter in, effecting their lives, slowly changing them. But nothing is overwhelming, they are given time to think about the events in the real world. Odessa is never portrayed as a radical upstart. She's just a working mom, but a mom with enough courage to buck the system, just a little. Spacek's Miriam is certainly no free thinker. At first, she is merely vexed at having her maid arrive late after walking 4.5 miles every morning. So, she begins to drive her up a couple of days a week.

Eventually, Miriam realizes there is more to life than club luncheons and Junior League meetings. Still, director Richard Pearce never lets the focus drift to those larger-than-life themes which choke so many flicks. Miriam changes, but the change is tiny in the world view of things. It is only in her small circle that she will never feel the same again.

The script is well-crafted and the direction precise, but this movie belongs to Goldberg and Spacek. Goldberg has learned the power of understatement. Spacek's nervous bird-like housewife is a tangle of emotion that spills out of her in tiny trembles and nervous primpings. Whereas Goldberg's controlled anger and fear in her eyes will have you clutching for a hankie.

There are no histrionics or grand gestures in this film. Just regular folks trying to adjust a lopsided color balance in their community. If ever there was a film you'd want your children to see, "The Long Walk Home" is it. They will come away with an understanding of their history and a sense of the power we can still have as American citizens.

"Guilty by Suspicion" Starring Robert De Niro, Annette Bening, George Wendt. Directed and written by Irwin Winkler. Produced by Arnon Milchin. Rated PG-13.

As we watch the conclusion to "Guilty by Suspicion," our hearts should be in our throats. We should be on the edge of our seats, weeping for the lives ruined by Senator Joseph McCarthy's witch hunts of the late Forties and early Fifties. That we are merely engaged and not completely engrossed by these scenes says something about Irwin Winkler's movie. It says something is wrong.

Winkler's been in the biz for years, working as an award-winning producer and writer. Technically, this is a wonderful film, as Winkler garnered some great performances from his actors and delivered a convincing period piece. Winkler gives great atmosphere - you can practically smell the smoke and corruption in the claustrophobic, House chamber where the House Un-American Activities Committee (HUAC) grilled its victims. But it still feels like a documentary. The film is just too subtle. Most filmmakers assume their audiences incapable of free-thought, so it may sound silly to complain about a director who is playing to our intellectual side. But theirs is a story screaming for raw emotion. People died because of their loss of civil rights. Those who didn't commit suicide, or drink themselves to death, found themselves unemployed and unwanted. This is passionate stuff. Unfortunately, this is not a passionate play.

Robert De Niro plays aging whiz-kid director David Merrill, a workaholic whose entire life has been the movies. Merrill ignored his real life for his reel life, and when he's called before the HUAC, his friends assume he will "purge" himself and name names, as he couldn't possibly live without his work. Well, Merrill surprises everyone with his ethical streak, and is himself surprised that his friends thought so little of him. Professionally, of course, he is ruined.

As Merrill rethinks his life, he begins to attain some of the values he lost along on the path to fame. But this metamorphosis is mostly told through De Niro's performance. There is the surprised glance to a friend who assumed Merrill would blacklist his own mother to remain Darryl Zanuck's wonderboy, or the deep love he shows for his ex-wife (Annette Bening) who stuck by his side when no one else would.

If De Niro's economic, touching performance had been matched by a powerful script, or even by stronger direction, "Guilty by Suspicion" would have been a heartbreaker. Oh, it's still better than most, and it teaches an important history lesson, but it could have been so much more.

Fish stocking gets underway

Across the state, staff of the Division of Fisheries and Wildlife are making preparations to release more than 660,000 trout into selected lakes and streams while open-water anglers struggle with the early stages of fishing fever.

In fact, stocking trucks began rolling early in March as crews from the Southeast District began releasing the 118,500 trout earmarked for southeastern ponds and rivers.

At this point the operation is in full swing in all districts. It has been a very successful season. Improvements in staffing levels at the Division's fish hatcheries have enabled the Division to raise 100,000 fish more than in 1990.

Furthermore, Dr. Mark Tisa, Assistant Director in charge of Fisheries, explains, not only are there more fish, they are large and in excellent condition. Fully 54% of the trout being released are classified as 12" or larger, according to Tisa, means that they weigh anywhere from 1 to 1 1/2 lbs. each.

In recent years the Division, responding to the urging of anglers around the state, has refocused its hatchery program to produce larger trout than in previous years, with smaller fish being reserved for streams which do not lend themselves to the large trout.

This year for the very first time in her recollection, Ellie Horwitz, Chief of Information & Education, notes that the Division has received calls from anglers complaining that the fish are too large! This irony is not lost on hatchery personnel who for years suffered under the taunts of anglers who formerly complained that there were many fish but that they weren't big enough.

In fact, Dr. Tisa explains that the Division's aquacultures staff can adjust the rearing regime over a multiyear period to produce a variety of sizes. They can produce large numbers of small fish, somewhat smaller numbers of larger fish or any balance of the two determined by the MFW. This year the fish are both abundant and large.

A complete list of waters slated for stocking and a list of pond for which the Division has fishermen's maps, may be obtained by sending a self addressed, stamped envelope to: Fishing Information, Massachusetts Division of Fisheries and Wildlife, Field Headquarters, Westborough, MA 01581.

Anglers wanting additional information are invited to send $2 to the above address and request the Division's 31 page brochure "Fish Massachusetts." This booklet contains the complete stocking list, information on the state's Sport-fishing Awards program, lists of waters known to be good for bass, as well as waters into which the Division has released northern pike or tiger muskies.

"Study Skills to Help Children"

Registration is now being accepted for a two evening seminar; Parents: Study Skills to Help Kids offered at Minuteman Tech. The program is for parents of students ages 11 through 18. Adults returning to a school are also welcome. Learn how study skills can provide the missing link for bright, capable learners whose potential is not reflected in school grades.

Nine of ten watch nutrition

Nearly nine out of ten consumers (89%) say they are concerned about nutrition when they shop for food, according to a Kraft Light Naturals Survey of 1,000 consumers.

The national telephone survey also showed that eight out of ten consumers have considerable interest in reduced fat, "light" or "lean" products.

"Interest in reduced fat products has become mainstream," said Edith Howard Hogan, R.D., L.D., Kraft Light Naturals Reduced Fat Cheese spokesperson and founder of Nutrition Consulting Services in Washington, D.C. "A few years ago, only a small percentage of the total population was interested in these products. But now, almost all shoppers are looking for reduced fat choices like Kraft Light Naturals to cut back on fat without sacrificing taste."

"And, with the increasing concern for nutrition, consumers look to newspapers and magazines for help in making food choices," said Hogan.

When asked for the primary source of their knowledge of nutrition, 34% of the shoppers listed newspaper and magazine articles, 15% cited food labels and 14% credited doctors or nutritionists.

The Kraft Light Naturals survey also revealed that eight out of ten consumers read ingredient and nutrition information on food labels when they shop.

"In addition, industry statistics tell us that the average number of products available in supermarkets has nearly doubled compared to 10 years ago. But, the survey shows that despite the increasing availability of products, 82% of today's busy shoppers are not devoting more time to making their choices," Hogan said.

"With the increasing concern for nutrition and growing number of choices, it is more important than ever for shoppers to understand what to look for and how to find it," said Hogan.

Study skills demystify the learning process for those who experience difficulty with it; these skills offer an explanation of the reasons for existing problems as well as provide solutions to them. They offer all students the means to become organized and confident learners. Listening, note taking, organizing, reading and test-wisdom strategies are a few of the many strategies presented.

The seminar leader, Roberta Wolman, has been a highly successful instructor of study skills for more than 17 years.

To register contact Minuteman Tech Community Education at (617) 861-7150, 8 a.m. to 9 p.m., Monday through Thursday and 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Friday. For your convenience telephone registration is accepted with a major credit card. The course fee is $24. To obtain specific course information contact the instructor in the evening at (617) 395-8045.

Treatment of snoring with a dental device

At the 1988 Annual Meeting of the American Lung Association and Thoracic Society and reported in the April issue of the American Review of Respiratory Disease the treatment of snoring and sleep apnea (cessation of breathing during sleep) with a dental device was discussed.

For patients with troublesome snoring and sleep apnea, but with little disability; the usual treatment, which can involve surgery, may be too rigorous and often unsatisfactory.

Snoring is caused by vibration in the partially obstructed airway and is associated with a decrease in the size of the throat's airway. Accordingly, a dental device has been designed to advance the lower jaw thereby increasing the size of the throat's airway.

In the initial study 16 patients were treated. Snoring was eliminated in six patients (43%) and decreased in the remaining eight (57%). Also, there was a reduction in sleep apnea, awakenings, leg jerks, morning tiredness and daytime sleepiness. (Two patients did not tolerate treatment because of lower jaw discomfort resulting from the slight forward repositioning.)

At a June 1990 meeting of the association of Professional Sleep Societies, there was a subsequent report on 68 patients. Snoring was eliminated in 42% and decreased in the rest of the patients. The other symptoms sleep apnea, etc. were eliminated in 51-87% of the patients.

Side effects of this mouth device include some lower jaw discomfort and slight increase in salivation; but these symptoms were absent or minor in two thirds of the patients. The conclusion was that this dental device is an effective treatment for simple snoring and is often effective treatment for obstructive sleep apnea of mild to moderate severity.

Norman Shuman, D.D.S. is presently accepting inquiries about this new development concerning snoring. His office is located at 36 Crescent St. in Wakefield.

Discussion of baseball history

The Boston Public Library will commemorate the 50th anniversary of one of the most memorable seasons in baseball history - 1941, when Ted Williams hit .406 and Joe DiMaggio hit safely in 56 consecutive games - and the publication of a new book on the fabled career of the former Red Sox great, with a panel discussion on "Ted Williams: Athlete and American Original," in the Rabb Lecture Hall of the Central Library in Copley Square on Tuesday evening, April 2nd at 6 p.m.

Co-authored by Dick Johnson, assistant curator of the Sports Museum of New England, and Boston Public Library librarian Glenn Stout, the new work, Ted Williams: A Portrait in Words and Pictures, is a remarkable collection of original essays, previously unpublished photos, and insightful biography, giving a fascinating portrait of one of the games greatest players. Many of the book's 175 photographs came from the BPL Print Department's Leslie Jones Collection, while much of the statistical material in the book was gleaned from the BPL's Harold Kaese Collection.

Both the new book, which is scheduled for release by Walker P Company, New York, later this month, and the career of the Hall of Famer, will be explored by the panel of noted Boston sportswriters, commentators, and authors which will be moderated by National Public Radio commentator and author Bill Littlefield. Panelists will include co-authors Dick Johnson and Glenn Stout, as well as Harvard author Stephen Jay Gould and Boston Globe writer Martin Nolan, and Luke Salisbury, author of The Answer is Baseball.

Unfortunately the camp, which is operated by Mass. Junior Conservation Camp Inc., and is co-sponsored by the Division of Fisheries and Wildlife, conducts only a single session each summer and enrollment is limited to 150 campers. Cost for the two-week program (all fees and field trips included) is $250.

Registrations are already flowing in. Parents, clubs and others intending to send a camper for the 1991 season, are urged to secure a place early. A deposit of $50 holds a campership until May 1.

For more information call Ellie Horwitz at (508) 792-7270.
